ico	Steven Dickinson
Information Commissioner's Office
Policy Delivery knowledgebase About Contact team
ICON > Policy Delivery knowledgebase > FOI knowledgebase
FOI/EIR FOI Section/Regulation Line to take:	s36 Issue Section 36: Common problems and issues and explains how we should address	s and issues that may arise in section 36 cases s them.
Further Information:
Problem/ issue	Our response
 There is insufficient evidence of the QP opinion e.g. The PA has not provided the submission made to the QP There is no documentary record of the QP's opinion 	If the PA has no record of the submission or the QP's opinion, we would accept a signed statement from the QP stating whether they saw the information in question, what factors they took into account and what their opinion was
It is not clear whether the PA's arguments are actually those considered by the QP.	and when they gave it. There is a form on our website that PAs can use to provide us with a record of the QP opinion.
	Note that this is a minimum requirement in cases where are no records of the actual process i.e. where we only have the PA's word for what happened.
There were flaws in the process (e.g. QP opinion not obtained) but these were corrected at internal review.	We accept that errors in applying an exemption can be corrected at the internal review stage. If the QP opinion was not given before the refusal notice was issued, s36 can still be engaged if the QP gives a reasonable opinion at internal review. The QP should base their opinion on the situation at the time of the request.
S36 is claimed for the first time at internal review or during our investigation	Public authorities have the right to raise s36 exemptions for the first time at internal review or during our investigation. In each case they are still required to obtain the reasonable opinion of the QP.
The QP has not specified level of prejudice (would/ would	Give the PA an opportunity to confirm what the QP meant.
be likely to)	If no confirmation received, apply 'would be likely to' unless there is clear evidence that the QP meant 'would'. For example, the QP's opinion may talk about the consequences of disclosure rather than possible consequences. If there is any doubt then apply 'would be likely to'
The PA claims s36 but has not obtained the QP opinion	If there is no QP opinion the exemption is not engaged. This applies in all cases except in relation to statistical information under s36(4).
The opinion has been given by someone other than the QP.	If another person is formally acting up i.e. they have been given the responsibilities of the QP's post, then accept it as a QP opinion.
	Otherwise, do not accept it as a QP opinion. For example, if a more junior official is merely 'covering' while the QP post holder is on leave, they are not the QP.

A QP has not been authorised for this PA

(i.e. the PA is not listed in s36(5)(a)-(n), or in the archived list produced by the Ministry of Justice and there has been no specific authorisation by a Minister previously)

The PA has extended the time for considering the PIT under s10(3) without first obtaining the QP opinion.

Case officer doesn't really agree with QP opinion

The PA should request an authorisation from a Minister of the Crown via the most relevant government department. If in doubt they should contact informationrights@justice.gsi.gov.uk

If no QP has been authorised s36 cannot be engaged (other than for statistical information).

If a QP has been authorised after the time for compliance but by the time of the internal review they can give their opinion and engage s36.

There is a procedural breach of s17(1). S36 cannot be engaged until the QP opinion has been given.

The test is not whether we accept or agree with the opinion but whether it is a reasonable opinion to hold. It is only not reasonable if no reasonable person could hold it.

http://intranet.child.indigo.local/FOIKB/pages/FOIPolicyadvicenote1section36commonproblemsandissues.aspx

The submission or the QP's reasoning includes irrelevant factors.

This approach means that it is likely that we will accept that the exemption is engaged more often than we used to.

Concentrate first on the actual opinion rather than the reasoning process that led up to it. The opinion is simply that prejudice/ inhibition would/ would be likely to occur. Consider whether this is an opinion that any reasonable person could hold.

If on the face of it, the opinion is not one that a reasonable person could hold or this is doubtful, consider the reasoning and the supporting arguments. They may shed light on why the QP came to their opinion.

We are not concerned with the quality of the reasoning process itself, only the substantive opinion.

In theory we may consider that it is unreasonable to say that prejudice/ inhibition would occur but reasonable to say it would be likely to occur.

This possibility is stated in our external guidance because we do not want PAs to claim 'would' in every case, simply in order to gain extra weight in the PIT. Remember that we have to accept or reject the QP's opinion as stated and if they say 'would' this will carry a greater weight over into the PIT than WBLT.

In practice such situations are likely to be rare. It is more likely that we would accept 'would' as a reasonable opinion, even if we do not agree with it.

No. The QP opinion is only about the likelihood of prejudice / inhibition (i.e. it would or would be likely to occur). If we accept that the opinion is reasonable we accept that the specified prejudice/ inhibition would or would be likely to occur, but we then go on to consider the severity, extent and frequency of that prejudice/ inhibition.

If we consider that it would not be particularly severe or extensive or occur frequently then it is possible to find that the PI in maintaining the exemption does not outweigh the PI in disclosure.

S36(2) is about the effects of disclosing the information, not the content of the information. If the content clearly represents a free and frank exchange of views/ advice then it may be easier to accept that disclosing it could lead to prejudice / inhibition but disclosing more anodyne, less controversial information could also have that effect, depending on the circumstances of the case. Concentrate on how the prejudice/ inhibition could happen rather than how free and frank the information is.

Consider whether the QP's opinion could be construed broadly to cover the exempted information, even if they did not specifically consider it. Bear in mind that it may not be feasible for the QP, who is a very senior official, to look at every piece of relevant information.

If the QP's opinion can be broadly construed to cover the withheld information, accept that is covered by the QP's opinion.

If the withheld information is not part of and clearly different from the information that the QP considered, then there is no QP opinion relating to that information.

QP specifies "would"; case officer thinks "WBLT" more realistic but difficult to say "would" not reasonable

I have had to accept the QP opinion as reasonable even though I don't agree with it. Doesn't giving due weight to the QP opinion mean that the PI will always favour maintaining exemption?

The PA has applied s36(2)(b)(i) or (ii) but the content of the information is not notably 'free and frank'

Officials have applied the QP's opinion to information that the QP does not appear to have considered.

Related Lines to Take	Details
Related Documents		Casework Advice Note 2,
Contact		CW
Date	21/11/2011	Policy Reference	CWAN001

• Information Commissioner's Office intranet

http://intranet.child.indigo.local/FOIKB/pages/FOIPolicyadvicenote1section36commonproblemsandissues.aspx

21/04/2015

ico. Information Commissioner's Office			9 73	Steven Dickinson
Policy Delivery knowledgebase	About	Contact team
ICON > Policy Delivery knowle	dgebase >	FOI knowledgebase

FOI/EIR FOI Section/Regulation s36 Issue Section 36: Reasonable opinion Line to take:

This document explains our change of approach to the definition of a 'reasonable opinion' in section 36 FOIA. It sets out the problems with our previous approach, the options for change we considered and the reasons for our new approach. It is intended as a background document for case workers and others who require a further explanation of how we have arrived at our new approach. It should be read in conjunction with the guidance document itself and the internal guidance for caseworkers on common problems and issues.

Further Information:

1. Introduction

Our previous approach was that, in order to be reasonable, the qualified person's (QP's) opinion must be both reasonable in substance and reasonably arrived at. This is taken from the Tribunal in Guardian and Brooke (at §64), which was endorsed in McIntyre (at §31) with the caveat that even where 'the method or process by which that opinion is arrived at is flawed in some way' (i.e. it is not reasonably arrived at) the opinion may still be reasonable if it is 'overridingly reasonable in substance'.

However, this approach creates problems of interpretation and terminology and problems in practice.

2 Problems with our previous approach

2.1 Problems of interpretation

The basis for the two part test is not entirely clear. The Tribunal in Guardian and Brooke appear to have derived the requirement that the opinion be reasonably arrived at from a 'golden rule' interpretation of the Act ('we derive this conclusion from the scheme of the Act and the tenor of s36' – at §64). They said that the fact that the reasonable opinion of the QP is required for the exemption to be engaged "is a protection which relies on the good faith and proper exercise of judgment of that person." The QP is therefore "required by law to give proper rational consideration to the formation of the opinion". Finally, because the opinion is a judgment about what will happen in the future, if the basis of the opinion (i.e. the process) could not be examined it would in many cases be effectively unchallengeable - to which they added 'we cannot think that that was the Parliamentary intention.' The question is whether this finding (which in any case is not binding on us) warrants the establishment of a rigid two part test, both parts of which must be 'passed', unless the McIntyre caveat applies.

Furthermore, there is a question as to what extent the Guardian and Brooke Tribunal's approach is influenced by, if not derived from, judicial review (JR) criteria. They made a point of saying (at §56) that they had not been referred to Lord Falconer's references to judicial review during the passage during the passage of the Freedom of Information Bill and so had not taken account of them. Nevertheless their comments at §64 on 'taking into account only relevant matters and ignoring irrelevant matters' reflect the Wednesbury test of reasonableness and JR criteria.

2.2 Problems of terminology

Secondly, the terminology is still not clear. The Tribunal in Guardian and Brooke did not define what they understood by 'reasonable in substance'. When they considered it (at §60) they were mainly concerned with dismissing the reference in our earlier guidance document to an opinion within 'a range of reasonable opinions'.

Similarly, the Tribunal in McIntyre did not define what they meant by an opinion that was 'overridingly reasonable in substance' as opposed to one that was merely 'reasonable in substance', yet this is an important distinction as it provides a way of finding that the QP opinion is reasonable when it does not satisfy the two part test. Our own suggested criteria in LTT35 are admitted not to be definitive.

2.3 Problems in practice

An analysis of DNs, together with feed back from case workers, shows the practical problems that flow from the interpretative issues. Despite ostensibly having a two part test, we are reluctant to find that an opinion was not reasonable purely on the basis that it was not reasonably arrived at. If we find that an opinion was not reasonable in substance; if it is, we are likely to class it as 'overridingly reasonable' in order to overlook the flaws in the reasoning process.

Case workers have suggested that we should either have a more prescriptive approach, insisting on reasonably arrived at and being willing to find that s36 is not engaged where this is lacking, or concentrate solely on whether an opinion is reasonable in substance.

3 Options considered

Three options for resolving these problems were considered:

Option 1: Base our understanding of 'reasonable' on JR criteria

This had the advantages of providing well established criteria and requiring consideration of the reasoning process and evidence of how the decision was reached.

However, this overlooks a fundamental difference between the two areas of law. Where the court in a JR case finds that an administrative decision was unreasonable, the outcome is that the decision is remitted back to the authority concerned; where we find that the QP opinion is unreasonable, the outcome is that the information is released (unless of course another exemption applies or the DN is appealed).

A rigid application of the two stage test based on JR criteria creates the risk of locking us in to an outcome that may not be appropriate, simply because the authority and the QP had not approached the decision making process properly.

Moreover, while Lord Falconer's comments can be read as a general statement about reasonableness, it is not clear that there is a Pepper v Hart justification for relying on them as an aid to interpretation.

Option 2: Develop our own definition of reasonable opinion

This has the advantage of allowing us to use elements of other approaches without being bound by them, in order to develop a definition we consider logical, clear, robust and workable. It also allows us to define the evidential requirements we are looking for. The disadvantage is that we are developing a definition by force of argument, against a background of Tribunal decisions which have largely accepted the Guardian and Brooke/ McIntyre approach

This was the option chosen.

Option 3: Continue and develop our current approach

http://intranet.child.indigo.local/FOIKB/pages/FOIPolicysection36reasonableopinion.aspx

This means accepting the current Guardian and Brooke/ McIntyre approach but doing more work to clarify and strengthen it. It is essentially the status quo but with more explanation. This has the advantage that it follows the approach followed by most Tribunals since Guardian and Brooke. The weakness of this approach is that it does not address the fundamental problems outlined above.

4. Our new approach to reasonableness

The new guidance document on section 36 is intended as a clear public statement of what we consider to be a reasonable opinion. The following comments support this and provide some further explanation.

We are basing our understanding of 'reasonable' on the plain meaning of the word. We will avoid adopting other definitions drawn from other areas of law or inventing a new meaning. For convenience, the definition in the Shorter Oxford English Dictionary can be used: "in accordance with reason; not irrational or absurd".

The opinion only has to be a reasonable opinion. An opinion that a reasonable person could hold is a reasonable opinion. It does not have to be the only reasonable opinion that could be held, or the 'most' reasonable opinion. We do not have to agree with the opinion; we only have to recognise that a reasonable person could hold it.

An opinion either is or is not reasonable. We should not say that the opinion is within a range of reasonable opinions. The term 'range' is misleading as it implies that some opinions are more reasonable than others. For this reason it was rejected by the Guardian and Brooke Tribunal at §60.

While an opinion that is absurd is not reasonable, that is not the same as saying that any opinion that is not absurd is reasonable. That was essentially the position we adopted before Guardian and Brooke and we should avoid saying it now because it is misleading. Rather, we should be asking whether the opinion is in accordance with reason, i.e. is it an opinion that a reasonable person could hold?

We are looking at the substantive opinion itself. The substantive opinion is simply whether the prejudice or inhibition specified in section 36(2)(a)-(c) would or would be likely to occur. We are not assessing whether the process by which this opinion was reached was reasonable (i.e. whether it was reasonably arrived at). The guidance says that PAs should document the process by which the opinion was reached, the factors considered and the reasons for the final opinion. This is in order for us to decide whether the final, substantive opinion was reasonable. The guidance makes the point that there may be situations where an opinion may appear on the face of it not to be reasonable, but when the background to it is explained it may be accepted as a reasonable opinion to hold. If PAs do not record and provide this, they run the risk that we may find the exemption is not engaged.

All of this implies that reasonableness is not intended to be a high hurdle. Provided the criteria are met we can accept that the opinion is reasonable. We still have scope in the PIT to consider whether the exemption should be maintained. The main focus of our consideration is likely to be on the PIT rather than on the engagement of the exemption.

Source

Details

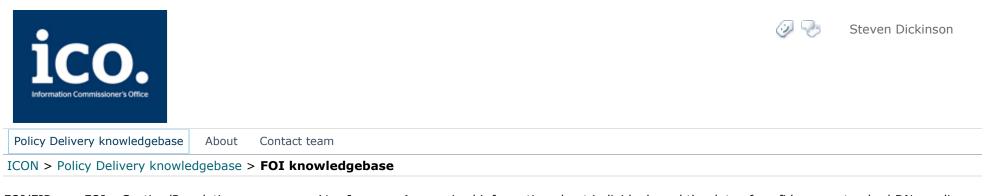

McKinnon v Secretary, Department of Treasury [2006] HCA 45 - in particular §60 and §129 (plain meaning of reasonable), §121 (due deference) and §131 (one reasonable ground).

Related Lines to Take Related Documents
Casework Advice Note 1, Contact		CW
Date	21/11/2011	Policy Reference	CWAN 002

• Information Commissioner's Office intranet

http://intranet.child.indigo.local/FOIKB/pages/FOIPolicysection36reasonableopinion.aspx

FOI/EIRFOISection/Regulations41IssueAnonymised information about individuals and the duty of confidence – standard DN wordingLine to take:

Where no individual can be reliably identified as the subject of information as a result of its release and reference to other material available to the general public, there will be no breach of confidence to action if that information is released.

Further Information:

This casework advice note only applies to cases in which the information under consideration is anonymous information about individuals. Case officers should continue to follow the approach set out in the lines to take in relation to all other cases involving section 41.

Where it is not possible to identify the subject of information from the material to be disclosed, either on its own or together with other information available to the general public, it is no longer necessary to consider each limb of the section 41 test of confidence.

If an individual cannot be reliably identified then there can be no expectation of confidence and no detriment to the confider by way of an invasion of privacy. It therefore follows that there can be no breach of confidence to action.

Case officers need to explain why identification of an individual is not possible. If it has been necessary to address the issue of identification in relation to section 40 the explanation in respect of section 41 will follow the same analysis. Once the identification point has been addressed the following wording can be used in decision notices to explain our conclusions regarding the duty of confidence.

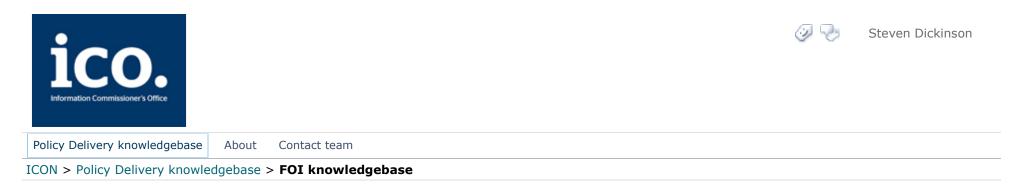

"In order for section 41 to apply it is necessary for all of the relevant elements of the test of confidence to be satisfied. Therefore if one or more of the elements is not satisfied then section 41 will not apply. The Commissioner has explained why he does not consider it possible to reliably identify an individual as the subject of the withheld information from its contents or if it is linked with other material available to the general public. In such circumstances he does not consider that there can be an expectation of confidence or that disclosure would cause detriment by way of an invasion of privacy. Therefore it follows that there can be no breach of confidence to action and section 41 does not apply".

Source	Details
Policy Team
Related Lines to Take
Related Documents
FS50416106, FS50371108, FS50383013
Contact		JP
Date	03/02/2012	Policy Reference	CWAN 003

• Information Commissioner's Office intranet

http://intranet.child.indigo.local/FOIKB/pages/FOIPolicyAnonymisedinformationaboutindividualsandthedutyofconfidencestandardDNwo... 21/04/2015

21/04/2015

FOI/EIR FOI Section/Regulation s12 Issue Exercising the Commissioner's discretion to accept late claims of section 12

Line to take:

The Commissioner has discretion to decide whether to accept a late claim of section 12 following the binding decision of the Upper Tribunal in the case of the All Party Parliamentary Group on Extraordinary Rendition v Information Commissioner & the Ministry of Defence (GIA/150-152/2011). Further Information:

The Commissioner has discretion to decide whether to accept a late claim of section 12 following the binding decision of the Upper Tribunal in the case of the All Party Parliamentary Group on Extraordinary Rendition v Information Commissioner & the Ministry of Defence (GIA/150-152/2011). The Upper Tribunal commented that it could reach a different conclusion to that found in the DEFRA/Home Office case because the "...section 12 cost exemption is somewhat different and raises particular considerations of its own; and we note that this was not the kind of claim that was the subject of Judge Jacobs in DEFRA" (paragraph 45). This allowed this Upper Tribunal to find that:

"... If the raising of a new exemption before the Commissioner is subject to the Commissioner's discretion, to be exercised fairly and in light of the statutory purposes, this both restores some meaning to the time limits and avoids potential unfairness to requesters" (paragraph 43).

In exercising the Commissioner's discretion, case-officers should consider the particular circumstances of the case, including whether the authority has collated the information for the purposes of applying an exemption, as well as any unfairness or disadvantage caused to the requestor in accepting a late claim.

Example

A public authority receives a single request and issues a refusal notice citing section 43. The requestor does not accept that the exemption is engaged and makes a complaint to the ICO.

As part of the investigation, the authority is informed that the Commissioner is unlikely to find that section 43 is engaged. At this stage, the public authority makes a late claim of section 12 i.e. it is no longer seeking to rely on section 43 in relation to the original request.

The Commissioner has discretion to accept or decline this late claim. In exercising this discretion, case-officers should consider the extent to which the public authority compiled the information in order to apply the exemption.

It is unlikely that the Commissioner would exercise his discretion to accept a late claim of section 12 where:

- the public authority has collated all of the requested information in order to make strong arguments which are focussed on the relevant information in support of its claim of the exemption and the information remained in collated form at the time of the late claim of section 12; or
- where the public authority has collated some rather than all of the requested information but where the remaining costs of collation would be minimal.

This is because there would be no or minimal costs to incur at the time of the claim of section 12 and it would be disadvantageous to the complainant to allow such a late claim.

However, the public authority may have applied the exemption largely based on existing knowledge and without sight of the requested information. Although this is not a practice we would recommend; if none of the requested information has been collated or if the costs still to be incurred in collating the information are significant, then we are more likely to accept the late claim of section 12 in order to give effect to the purpose behind section 12 in avoiding unnecessary and burdensome work.

Similarly, the Commissioner may accept a late claim of section 12 where the authority has not already collated the requested information for other reasons such as:

- where the public authority initially claimed that it did not hold the requested information;
- where the public authority does not engage with the request at all and fails to provide a refusal notice or internal review;
- where the public authority interprets a request narrowly and only later realises later that the complainant is seeking a lot more information than originally thought.

Environmental Information Regulations:

It should be noted that the above does not apply to the equivalent provision under the Regulations (regulation 12(4)(b) – manifestly unreasonable) as the Court of Appeal (*) has determined that this provision should be treated as an exception. Accordingly, as the Commissioner has no discretion in deciding whether or not to accept a late claim of an exception, he is obliged to consider a late claim of regulation 12(4)(b).

(*) - [2011] EWCA Civ 1606 (Birkett / DEFRA)

Source

Upper Tribunal

Related Lines to Take Related Documents Details

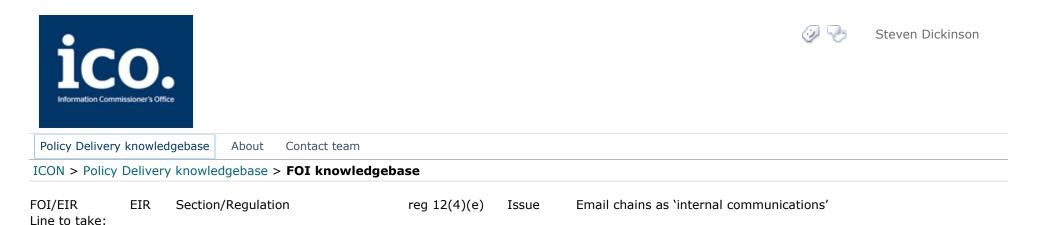

All Party Parliamentary Group on Extraordinary Rendition v Information Commissioner & the Ministry of Defence

GIA/150-152/2011 (APPGER) Contact		HD
Date	21/03/2012	Policy Reference	CWAN 004

Information Commissioner's Office intranet

http://intranet.child.indigo.local/FOIKB/pages/FOIPolicyexercisingthecommissionersdiscretiontoacceptlateclaimsofsection12.aspx

21/04/2015

This CWAN provides advice to case officers on how to investigate whether email chains are 'internal' for the purposes of regulation 12(4)(e).

We will expect a public authority claiming the exception to provide confirmation that all recipients at each stage of an email chain were internal.

Further Information:

NOTE: This CWAN is intended to provide detailed guidance to help in difficult cases involving lengthy email chains with a large number of recipients. In many straightforward cases it will not be necessary to refer to this in any detail.

A significant proportion of business communication is now done via email. Public authorities will therefore often claim the internal communications exception (regulation 12(4)(e)) for emails. However, they do not always distinguish between internal and external emails.

Unlike other forms of communication, emails will often be part of a 'chain' or 'string' of replies, forwards etc, which also include the text of all earlier emails. There may be different recipients at each stage of the chain. This raises particular issues when considering whether an email chain should be seen as an 'internal communication' for the purposes of regulation 12(4)(e) – it is possible that a single email chain may contain both internal and external sections.

Starting point - guidance

Case officers should first read our guidance: Internal communications (regulation 12(4)(e).

The guidance makes clear that if an internal email has been deliberately sent, copied or forwarded to someone outside the public authority, it is not an internal communication. This means that, to accept the exception is engaged, we need to establish that all of the recipients of an email were internal (including the sender and those in cc and bcc fields). If any of the recipients to an individual email are external, the email is not an internal communication.

For email chains, we need to establish that all of the recipients of every email in the chain were internal in order to find that the whole chain is an internal communication. If any of the recipients at any stage in the chain were external, this changes the outcome for the chain up to that point. In brief, this means there are three possible outcomes for an email chain:

- If the final email in the chain was sent or copied to someone outside the PA: the whole chain has been sent externally and none of it is an internal communication.
- If the final email (or emails) were purely internal, but an earlier email in the chain was sent or copied to someone outside the PA: the final email (or emails) are internal communications, but the chain up to that point is not.
- If all recipients of every email in the chain were internal: the whole chain is an internal communication.

Investigating whether recipients were internal

To uphold the exception we need to establish that all email recipients are internal. However, it is possible that the withheld information may run to hundreds of emails with multiple recipients. It is not practical for case officers to independently research and confirm the status of every individual recipient of each email.

Our starting point is that if a public authority wishes to claim the exception, it must demonstrate to our satisfaction that the exception is engaged. It cannot expect the ICO to do this work for it. Our primary source of evidence will therefore be a statement from the public authority, unless anything else clearly contradicts this. In most cases the statement will be all we need.

We will also consider the following:

- Any full email addresses listed in the emails.
- The content and context of the emails (there is no need for case officers to proactively search the content for indications of third party involvement, but if we become aware that it obviously points one way or another we will take it into account).
- Any arguments specifically raised by the complainant that the emails were not internal (we will then seek the PA's response and choose the more likely explanation).

Obtaining a statement from the PA

Case officers should refer PAs to our guidance, and highlight that the exception only covers purely internal emails that have not been forwarded or copied outside the PA. In order for an email to be an internal communication, every recipient must be internal. Case officers should then ask PAs the following:

- Can you confirm that everyone named in the 'from', 'to', 'cc' and 'bcc' fields of each email was an employee or official of the PA?
- Can you confirm that the email chain has not at any point been sent or copied to a third party (including contractors or external advisers)?

In many cases we anticipate that obtaining this statement will be enough to justify a finding that the exception is engaged.

Note that we are not asking the PA to go through every email and justify each individual name to us in detail. We are simply asking for a global confirmation. It is up to the PA to satisfy itself that the emails were internal in order to provide the confirmation – eg someone involved in the original email chain may be able to simply confirm from memory that the emails were not circulated to anyone outside the PA. We are simply asking the PA to provide us with a confirmation backed up by some sort of evidence. Whether it chooses to rely on fresh checks or the recollection of someone involved is up to the PA.

Case officers should also briefly scan through the names in the from/to/cc/bcc fields of the withheld emails to ensure there are no obvious external email addresses listed (ie name@another-organisation). This should be a quick scanning exercise - there is no need to consider the contact names in any detail, compile a list of names, or drill down to recipient properties. (We appreciate a quick glance will not uncover all or even many external contacts, as full email addresses are not always visible. However, the idea here is just to rule out clear evidence of external email addresses.)

Work backwards, from the latest emails to the earliest. This is because once any single email in a chain has been sent or copied externally, the whole chain up to that point becomes external and there will be no need to consider the earlier emails individually.

Once we have the PA's response, our position should be as follows:

- If the PA confirms that all recipients are internal, there are no obvious external email addresses, and there is no other obvious reason to doubt the PA, we will accept the PA's confirmation as sufficient evidence that the exception is engaged. This is not foolproof, but the standard of proof is the balance of probabilities (more likely than not). We consider this is a proportionate approach to establishing the facts on the balance of probabilities, in the absence of any other contradictory evidence.
- If the PA confirms that all recipients are internal, but the case officer becomes aware of potentially contradictory evidence (eg there is an apparently external email address, or the complainant raises specific allegations that a particular email was sent externally, or the content/context of the emails

http://intranet.child.indigo.local/FOIKB/pages/FOIPolicyCWAN005.aspx

suggest third parties must have been involved), the case officer should put this to the PA and ask it to explain the discrepancy. The case officer must then make a judgement on the facts as to which explanation is more likely. The exception is only engaged if the case officer is satisfied that on the balance of probabilities (ie more likely than not) all recipients are internal.

- If the PA states that an email was sent or copied to an external recipient, or the case officer is satisfied that an external email address is clearly listed, or it is clear that a third party was involved from the content of the information, that email (and any email chain up to that point) is not an internal communication.
- If the PA refuses to engage and give the confirmation (eg because it is not confident that all recipients were internal, or because it disagrees with our guidance and argues there is no need to confirm that every single recipient was internal), case officers should obtain signatory input via the CR07 form. However, we anticipate that such cases should be rare as it will be in the PA's interests to provide the confirmation to support their case.

Multiple copies of emails / emails in multiple chains

The nature of email chains means that the requested information could include multiple copies of the same email – eg the individual email, the same email in a chain of replies, and the same email in a separate chain of forwards and replies.

However, case officers do not need to compare the content of email chains and emails to identify any crossover or duplication. It is acceptable to simply consider each email or email chain on its own merits, ignoring any possible duplication. If there are multiple versions, this may mean, for example, that the original individual email is accepted as an internal communication, even though the same email within a later chain that was forwarded to a third party would not engage the exception.

Our position that each email or chain can be considered on its own merits (ignoring the existence of the same email in other chains) is for the following reasons:

- In effect, we are thinking of an email chain as multiple documents duplicating some of the same information. Each email in a chain is a separate document or communication, even if it includes some of the same text (ie the text of any preceding emails). The question is simply whether the particular email(s) caught by the request are internal communications. If the only version of the information within the scope of the request is contained in an individual internal email or internal chain, this is technically and factually part of an internal communication and so engages the exception. The later external email forwarding the same information would not engage the exception, but it is not caught by the request and so does not need to be considered.
- Practically speaking, it would be very difficult to establish that an individual email has definitely not been forwarded outside a PA later in another context. We are only likely to be able to consider the information actually falling within the scope of the request. The only practical position is therefore to limit the analysis to the actual emails caught by the request.
- If the request catches multiple versions of an email, some of which are internal and some of which are not, the requester will not be disadvantaged by accepting that some are internal. The same text will also be contained within any external email chain, and so all of the information from the original email would still be released to the requester.
- If the request catches the full email chain, our position (as set out above) is to work backwards through the chain. This ensures that each email is considered in its own right. If any of the emails have been sent outside, all of the information contained in that email (ie the text of the full chain up to that point) is part of an external communication and the exception is not engaged for that information. We do not need to go on to consider the status of the earlier emails individually, as there is no additional information contained in them.

Attachments to emails

Where there have been multiple documents attached at different stages of an email chain, it may be particularly difficult to establish which document (or version) was attached to which email.

See CWAN 006 for general advice on how to identify email attachments.

Note that documents attached to internal emails are not automatically internal communications. Nonetheless, it may be necessary to establish whether a document was attached to an internal or external email, as this can affect the outcome. See the guidance for more information on our position on attachments. In summary:

Email	Attached document	Is 12(4)(e) engaged?
Internal email	Internal document	Yes
Internal email	External document	No - if request would catch document in its own right.
		Yes - if request only catches document because it was attached to the email.
External email	Internal document	No
External email	External document	No

*External = received from or shared with a third party

If it is clear that several documents are within the scope of the request, but some of them were attached to external emails, and the PA cannot satisfactorily confirm which attachments were which: the PA has not established that the exception applies to any of the documents. We should find that the exception is not engaged for any of the documents.

Source Policy Delivery Related Lines to Take CWAN 006 (email attachments) Related Documents	Details
Guidance: Internal communications (regulation 12(4)(e))
Contact		LS
Date	13/11/2012	Policy Reference	CWAN 005

http://intranet.child.indigo.local/FOIKB/pages/FOIPolicyCWAN005.aspx

http://intranet.child.indigo.local/FOIKB/pages/FOIPolicyCWAN005.aspx

Policy Delivery knowledgebase About Contract team ICON > Policy Delivery knowledgebase > FOI knowledgebase Enail attachments Enail attachments FIR A request for an email should generally be interpreted as including any documents attached to that email. Image: Contract team We will require public authorities to provide a written statement clearly identifying which documents were attached to each ornal. First Image: Contract team Further Information: Image: Contract team Image: Contract team If the withride information includes multiple emails with attached documents, it may be difficult to establish which document, (or version) was attached to which document corresponds to which email. However, we will usually need to identify which documents were attached to which email in order to determine what information is actually within the scope of the request. It may also be necessary to identify attachments: • There is no need for absolute certainty - the standard is the balance of probabilities (more likely than not). • We will generally require the PA to provide as with a written statement (is a letter or email) which identifies which documents were attached to which email to a transment as attached to which emails. This statement sough to assolute certainty - the standard is the balance of probabilities (more likely than not). • We will generally require the PA to provide as with a written statement (is a letter or email) which identifies which documents were attached to which emails. This statement sough to a size casole th	information Co	ommissioner's Office					I 🖓 😼	Steve	n Dickinson
FOU/EIR FOU and EIR Section/Regulation 1, Part II exemptions reg 5, reg issue Email attachments Une to take: A request for an email should generally be interpreted as including any documents attached to that email. We will require public authorities to provide a written statement clearly identifying which documents were attached to each email. Further Information: If the withheid information includes multiple emails with attached documents, it may be difficult to establish which document (or version) was attached to which email. PAs often of privide a builde of printed emails (which simply list titles of attachments) and a bundle of associated documents, without clearly identifying which document corresponds to which email. However, we will usually need to identify which documents were attached to which email in order to determine what information is actually within the scope of the request. It may also be necessary to identify attachments: • There is no need for absolute certainty – the standard is the balance of probabilities (more likely than not). • We will generally require the PA to provide us with a written statement (e a letter or email) which identifies which documents were attached to which emails. This statement as sufficient widence, unsets that its will be difficult, as centils are generally source detectronically and its should be asked to exocument. Corresponds to different attachment titles, or their cuplanation is otherwise cl-contracity on the should be asked to exocument. • There is no need for absolute certaint, which takes there is any otherwise statement as sufficient widence, uneness there is any othe asked to in the pare	Policy Delive	ery knowledgebase	About Contact team
IPR 12 Une to take: A request for an email should generally be interpreted as including any documents attached to that email. We will require public authonties to provide a written statement clearly identifying which documents were attached to each email. Further Information: If the withheid information includes multiple emails with attached documents, it may be difficult to establish which document (or version) was attached to which email. As often provide a bundle of printed emails (which simply list titles of attachments) and a bundle of associated documents, without clearly identifying which document corresponds to which email. However, we will usually need to identify which documents were attached to which email in order to determine what information is actually within the scope of the request. It may also be necessary to identify attachments in order to decide whether an exemption or exception is engaged. In such cases we will take the following approach to identifying attachments: There is no need for absolute certainty - the standard is the balance of probabilities (more likely than not). We will generally require the At to provide us with a written statement. (le a letter or email) which identifies which documents were attached to which emails. This statement should be from either (1) someone personally involved in the email chain or (2) someone with appropriate records management systems (or form the email folders onclusing at regulater within the sleet-onic record management systems (or form the email folders onclusing). We can accept the At the sime document, were attached to use at the or which documents are equily by the attachments within the sleet-onic record management systems (or fo	ICON > Polic	cy Delivery knowl	edgebase > FOI knowledge	ebase
A request for an email should generally be interpreted as including any documents attached to that email. We will require public authorities to provide a written statement clearly identifying which documents were attached to each email. Further Information: If the withheid information includes multiple emails with attached documents, it may be difficult to establish which document (or version) was attached to which emails. Plao other provide a bound of printed emails (which simply list titles of attachments) and a bundle of associated documents, without clearly identifying which document corresponds to which email. thowever, we will usually need to identify which documents were attached to which email in order to determine what information is actually within the scope of the request. It may also be necessary to identify attachments in order to decide whether an exemption or exception is engaged. In such cases we will take the following approach to identifying attachments: There is no need for absolute certainty – the standard is the balance of probabilities (more likely than not). We will generally require the PA to provide us with a written statement (e a letter or email) which identifies which documents were attached to which emails. This statement should be from entite (1) someone prosonally involved in the email chain or (2) someone with appropriate records management knowledge and access. We do not anticipate that this will be difficult, as emails are generally atordivedus concerned). We can accept this written statement as sufficient evidence, unless there is any obvious evidence pointing to a different conclusion (g). Ne can accept this written discrepancy, and the case officer will then need to make a judgement on whether it is more likely than not that we have the correct document. If the PA aconot provide a satisfactory statement, but we case for a ende to topicly. In such cases the PA should be associated to explain the discrepancy, and the case officer will then need to make a judgemen	FOI/EIR		ction/Regulation		Issue	Email attachments
We will require public authorities to provide a written statement clearly identifying which documents were attached to each email. Further Information: If the writhhold information includes multiple emails with attached documents, it may be difficult to establish which document (or version) was attached to which menil. Pao tinne provide a bundle of printed emails (which simply list titles of attachments) and a bundle of associated documents, without clearly identifying which document corresponds to which email. However, we will usually need to identify which documents were attached to which email in order to determine what information is actually within the scope of the request. It may also be necessary to identify attachments in order to decide whether an exemption or exception is engaged. In such cases we will take the following approach to identifying attachments: • There is no need for absolute certainty - the standard is the balance of probabilities (more likely than not). • We will generally require the PA to provide us with a written statement (ie a letter or email) which identifies which documents were attached to which emails. • There is no need for absolute certainty - the standard is the balance of probabilities (more likely than not). • We will generally require the PA to identify attachments: • There is no need for absolute certaints on anticipate that this will be difficult, as emails are generally stored electronically and it should be strangityforward for the PA to identify attachments within its electronic record management systeme (ord) weak cases the PA to along the associated to associated to ashold be strestored in anogenet systeme (ord) comment. <td>Line to take:</td> <td></td> <td></td> <td></td> <td></td> <td></td> <td></td> <td></td> <td></td>	Line to take:
Further Information: If the withheld information includes multiple emails with attached documents, it may be difficult to establish which document (or version) was attached to which email. PAs often provide a bundle of printed emails (which simply list titles of attachments) and a bundle of associated documents, without clearly identifying a which document corresponds to which email. However, we will usually need to identify which documents were attached to which email in order to determine what information is actually within the scope of the request. It may also be necessary to identifying attachments in order to decide whether an exemption or exception is engaged. In such cases we will take the following approach to identifying attachments: There is no need for absolute certainty – the standard is the balance of probabilities (more likely than not). We will generally require the PA to provide us with a written statement (le a letter or email) which identifies which documents were attached to which mails. This statement should be from aither (1) someone parsonally involved in the email chain or (2) comeone with appropriate records management treatment as stifficient evidence, unless there is any obvious evidence pointing to a different conclusion (eg the PA coldied be scraphtformer for the same didocument corresponds to different attachment titles, or their explanation is otherwise self-contraction). If the PA cannot provide a satisfactory statement, but the case officer needs to correctly identify than not that we have the correct document. if the PA cannot provide a satisfactory statement, but the case officer needs to correctly identify ensuil attachments which documents are caught by the request, and the case officer needs to correctly identify ensuil attachments.
If the withheld information includes multiple emails with attached documents, it may be difficult to establish which document (or version) was attached to which email. PAs often provide a bundle of printed emails (which simply list titles of attachments) and a bundle of associated documents, without clearly identifying which document corresponds to which email. However, we will usually need to identify which documents were attached to which email in order to determine what information is actually within the scope of the request. It may also be necessary to identify attachments in order to decide whether an exemption or exception is engaged. In such cases we will take the following approach to identifying attachments: • There is no need for absolute certainty – the standard is the balance of probabilities (more likely than not). • We will generally require the PA to provide us with a written statement (is a letter or email) which identifies which documents were attached to which emails. This statement should be form either (1) someone personally involved in the email folders of the individuals concerned). We can accept this written statement as sufficient electronic record management systems (or from the email folders of the individuals concerned). We can accept this written statement as sufficient evidence, unless there is any obvious evidence pointing to a different conclusion (eg the PA claims that the same document. Corresponds to different datamment titles, or their explaintion is otherwise self-contradicory). In such cases the PA should be assided too graphorpitate satesfractory statement, but the case officer needs to correctly identify the attachments is norder to know which documents are caught by the request for all email discussions on a certain topic), we should consider issuing an Information Notice. (Alternatively, if we accept that the PA has conducted appropriate searches but is genuinely unable to identify the attachments. (Alternatively, if we accept that the PA has conducted appropriate se	We will requ	ire public authori	ties to provide a written state	ement clearly identifying which doc	uments w	vere attached to each e	email.
email. PAs often provide a bundle of printed emails (which simply list titles of attachments) and a bundle of associated documents, without clearly identifying which document corresponds to which meail. However, we will usually need to identify which documents were attached to which email in order to determine what information is actually within the scope of the request. It may also be necessary to identify attachments in order to decide whether an exemption or exception is engaged. In such cases we will take the following approach to identifying attachments: • There is no need for absolute certainty – the standard is the balance of probabilities (more likely than not). • We will generally require the PA to provide us with a written statement (ie a letter or email) which identifies which documents were attached to which mealls. This statement should be from either (1) someone personally involved in the email chain or (2) someone with appropriate records management knowledge and access. We do not anticipate that this will be difficult, as remails are generally stored electronically and it should be straightforward for the PA to induce students within electronic record management systems (or from the email foldiers or the individuals concerned). We can accept this written statement is a sufficient evidence, unless there is any obvious evidence pointing to a different conclusion (eg the PA claims that the same document. corresponds to different atchments titles, or their explanation is otherwise self-contradicory). In such cases the PA has conduced appropriate secretes but is genuinely unable to identify email attachments in order to know which documents are caught by the request (a g a request for all email discussions on a certain topic), we should consider issuing an Information Notice. (Alternatively, if the PA cannot provided a satisfactory statement, but the case officer needs to correctly identify meal attachments in order to know which documents are caught by the request (eg a request for all email discu	Further Infor	rmation:
the request. It may also be necessary to identify attachments in order to decide whether an exemption or exception is engaged. In such cases we will take the following approach to identifying attachments: • There is no need for absolute certainty – the standard is the balance of probabilities (more likely than not). • We will generally require the PA to provide us with a written statement (ie a letter or email) which identifies which documents were attached to which emails. This statement should be from either (1) someone personally involved in the email chain or (2) someone with appropriate records management have the early and access. We do not anticipate that this will be difficult, as emails are generally stored electronically and it should be straightforward for the PA to identify attachments within its electronic record management systems (or from the email folders of the individuals concerned). We can accept this written statement tatechment titles, or their explanation is otherwise self-contraditory. In such cases the PA should be asked to explain the discrepancy, and the case officer will then need to make a judgement on whether it is more likely than not that we have the correct document. • If the PA cannot provide a satisfactory statement, but the case officer needs to correctly identify the attachments, we can accept on the balance of probabilities that information on the attachments is no their discussions on a certain topic), we should consider issuing an Information Notice. (Alternatively, if we accept that the PA has conducted appropriate searches but is genuinely unable to identify the attachments, we can accept on the balance of probabilities that information on the attachments is order to apply on exemption or exception, the PA has not decide appropriate searches but is genuinely unable to identify the PA is not case officer needs to correctly identify the therewere, and the case officer needs to correctly identify the therewere email attachments is no theid. We should however consider rai	email. PAs o	ften provide a bu	ndle of printed emails (which
 There is no need for absolute certainty – the standard is the balance of probabilities (more likely than not). We will generally require the PA to provide us with a written statement (ie a letter or email) which identifies which documents were attached to which emails. This statement should be from either (1) someone personally involved in the email chain or (2) someone with appropriate records management knowledge and access. We do not anticipate that this will be difficult, as emails are generally stored electronically and it should be straightforward for the PA to identify attachments within its electronic record management systems (or from the email folders of the individuals concerned). We can accept this written statement as sufficient evidence, unless there is any obvious evidence pointing to a different conclusion (eg the PA claims that the same document corresponds to different attachment titles, or their explanation is otherwise self-contradictory). In such cases the PA should be asked to explain the discrepancy, and the case officer will then need to make a judgement on whether it is more likely than not that we have the correct document. If the PA cannot provide a satisfactory statement, but the case officer needs to correctly identify the attachments, we can accept on the balance of probabilities that information on the attachments is not held. We should however consider raising concerns about the PA's records management.) If the PA cannot provide a satisfactory statement, but we know that particular documents must be caught by the request, and the case officer needs to apply an exemption or exception, the PA has not established that the exemption or exception applies to any of the documents and we should find that it is not engaged for those documents. Source Details Source Details Policy Delivery Related Ocuments Contact 								lly withir	n the scope of
We will generally require the PA to provide us with a written statement (ie a letter or email) which identifies which documents were attached to which emails. This statement should be from either (1) someone personally involved in the email chain or (2) someone with appropriate records management knowledge and access. We do not anticipate that this will be difficult, as emails are generally stored electronically and it should be straightforward for the PA to identify attachments within its electronic record management systems (or from the email folders of the individuals concerned). We can accept this written statement as sufficient evidence, unless there is any obvious evidence pointing to a different conclusion (eg the PA claims that the same document corresponds to different attachment tilles, or their explanation is otherwise self-contradictory). In such cases the PA should be asked to explain the discrepancy, and the case officer will then need to make a judgement on whether it is more likely than not that we have the correct document. If the PA cannot provided a satisfactory statement, but the case officer needs to correctly identify email attachments in order to know which documents are caught by the request (eg a request for all email discussions on a certain topic), we should consider issuing an Information Notice. (Alternatively, if we accept that the PA has conducted appropriate searches but is genuinely unable to identify the attachments, we can accept on the balance of probabilities that information on the attachments in order to apply an exemption or exception, the PA has not established that the exemption or exception applies to any of the documents and we should find that it is not engaged for these documents. If the PA cannot provide a satisfactory statement, but we know that particular documents must be caught by the request, and the case officer needs to correctly identify whether they were email attachments in order to apply an exemption or exception, the PA has not establishe	In such case	s we will take the	e following approach to identi	fying attachments:
emails. This statement should be from either (1) someone personally involved in the email chain or (2) someone with appropriate records management knowledge and access. We do not anticipate that this will be difficult, as emails are generally stored electronically and it should be straightforward for the PA to identify attachments within its electronic record management systems (or from the email folders of the individuals concerned). We can accept this written statement as sufficient evidence, unless there is any obvious evidence pointing to a different conclusion (eg the PA claims that the same document corresponds to different tachment titles, or their explanation is otherwise self-contradictory). In such cases the PA should be asked to explain the discrepancy, and the case officer will then need to make a judgement on whether it is more likely than not that we have the correct document. If the PA cannot provided a satisfactory statement, but the case officer needs to correctly identify email attachments in order to know which documents are caught by the request (eg a request for all email discussions on a certain topic), we should consider issuing an Information Notice. (Alternatively, if we accept that the PA has conducted appropriate searches but is genuinely unable to identify the attachments, we can accept on the balance of probabilities that information on the attachments is not held. We should however consider raising concerns about the PA's records management.) If the PA cannot provide a satisfactory statement, but we know that particular documents must be caught by the request, and the case officer needs to correctly identify whether they were email attachments is not held. We should however consider raising concerns about the PA's records management.) If the PA cannot provide a satisfactory statement, but we know that particular documents must be caught by the request	• There	is no need for ab	osolute certainty – the standa	ard is the balance of probabilities (r	nore likely	y than not).
are caught by the request (eg a request for all email discussions on a certain topic), we should consider issuing an Information Notice. (Alternatively, if we accept that the PA has conducted appropriate searches but is genuinely unable to identify the attachments, we can accept on the balance of probabilities that information on the attachments is not held. We should however consider raising concerns about the PA's records management.) • If the PA cannot provide a satisfactory statement, but we know that particular documents must be caught by the request, and the case officer needs to correctly identify whether they were email attachments in order to apply an exemption or exception, the PA has not established that the exemption or exception applies to any of the documents and we should find that it is not engaged for those documents. Source Details Policy Delivery CWAN 005 (email chains) Related Documents CWAN 005 (email chains) Contact LS	emails knowl PA to writte docun explai	s. This statement edge and access. identify attachme n statement as su nent corresponds n the discrepancy	should be from either (1) so We do not anticipate that th ents within its electronic reco ufficient evidence, unless the to different attachment titles	meone personally involved in the e is will be difficult, as emails are ge rd management systems (or from t re is any obvious evidence pointing s, or their explanation is otherwise	mail chair nerally sto he email to a diffe self-contr	n or (2) someone with ored electronically and folders of the individu erent conclusion (eg th adictory). In such case	appropriate I it should be als concerned ne PA claims t es the PA sho	records straight d). We ca that the ould be a	management forward for the an accept this same asked to correctly identify whether they were email attachments in order to apply an exemption or exception, the PA has not established that the exemption or exception applies to any of the documents and we should find that it is not engaged for those documents. Source Details Policy Delivery CWAN 005 (email chains) Related CWANS CWAN 005 (email chains) Related Documents LS	are ca we ac	ught by the requ cept that the PA I	lest (eg a request for all ema has conducted appropriate se	il discussions on a certain topic), w earches but is genuinely unable to i	e should d dentify th	consider issuing an Inf le attachments, we ca	formation Not n accept on t	tice. (Alt he balan	ernatively, if ice of
Policy Delivery Related CWANS Related Documents Contact	correc	tly identify wheth	her they were email attachm	ents in order to apply an exemptior	or excep	otion, the PA has not e
Related CWANS CWAN 005 (email chains) Related Documents LS	Source					Details
Related Documents Contact LS	Policy Delive	ry
Contact	Related CWA	NS					CWAN 005	(email o	chains)
	Related Docu	uments
Date 13/11/2012 Policy Reference CWAN 006
	Date					13/11/2012	Policy Refere	ence	CWAN 006

http://intranet.child.indigo.local/FOIKB/pages/FOIPolicyCWAN006.aspx

Information Commissioner's Office					Ø B	Steven Dickinson
Policy Delivery knowledgebase		Contact team
ICON > Policy Delivery knowl	edgebase	> FOI knowledg	ebase
FOI/EIR FOI Section/Re	gulation	s44 Is	sue	ECHR as a statutory prohibition under s44(1) FOIA; in particular	ular Article 8	8

The European Convention on Human Rights (ECHR), and in particular Article 8, can be a statutory prohibition under s44(1) FOIA, but there will be limited circumstances in which it will be necessary to consider it.

Further Information:

Line to take:

Basis for the view that the ECHR be a statutory prohibition

- Under section 6(1) of the Human Rights Act (HRA), "it is unlawful for a public authority to act in a way which is incompatible with a Convention right" unless the conditions in s6(2) are met.
- Under s7(1) HRA a victim of such an unlawful act may bring legal proceedings against the authority. A person who would be a victim can bring proceedings in respect of a proposed action.
- In order for s44(1) FOIA to be engaged on this basis it would necessary to establish that a proposed disclosure would be incompatible with a Convention right.
- The Commissioner is also bound by s6(1) HRA. It would therefore be unlawful for the Commissioner to order the disclosure of information if it would infringe a Convention right.

Article 8 ECHR as a statutory prohibition

The view that Article 8 can provide a statutory prohibition is based on the plain meaning of the words in the HRA and the ECHR:

- Article 8(1) ECHR says that everyone has the right to privacy i.e. the right to respect for private and family life, home and correspondence.
- Article 8(2) says that public authorities shall not interfere with this right unless certain conditions are met i.e. the interference is in accordance with the law and necessary in a democratic society in pursuit of certain legitimate and specified interests.

On this basis, if disclosing information would be an interference with the right to privacy and it would not be justified in the terms of Article 8(2), then the public authority would be acting unlawfully, because they would be acting in a way which is incompatible with a Convention right. Only the victim of the unlawful act (or the proposed unlawful act) could bring proceedings against the authority.

Note: the contrary view, that Article 8 does not constitute a statutory prohibition, is often based on the decision of the Information Tribunal (as it then was) in Pauline Bluck v Information Commissioner & Epsom and St Helier University NHS Trust EA/2006/0090 at §§31-32. We consider that those comments were obiter, as the decision was made on the basis of s41, not s44, and furthermore an Information Tribunal decision is not a binding precedent.

Circumstances in which this could be used

We expect that in practice there will be few FOIA cases in which it is necessary to consider the s44 exemption on this basis. As usage as the primary exemption will be very rare the Commissioner does not currently cover it in external guidance. If the information in question constitutes personal data, then disclosure may contravene DPA principles, in which case it would be exempt under s40(2). If disclosure would or would be likely to endanger the physical or mental health or the safety of any individual then s38 FOIA may be engaged, and there is a weighty public interest in avoiding this danger. Nearly all of the issues covered in the ECHR are essentially reflected in the FOIA exemptions.

However, there may be cases in which the information does not meet the definition of personal data, because it does not identify a specific individual but to disclose it would be an unnecessary interference with the privacy of individuals. For example, if the information showed that one of a group of people living at a particular address was guilty of a sexual offence, but it was not possible to identify the individual concerned, then it would not constitute personal data, but it is conceivable that to disclose that information would impact on the privacy of all the people at that address, because of the likely repercussions. In such a case it is likely that s38 FOIA would be engaged, but if it is not, or if the balance of the PIT is not in favour of the exemption, then it may nevertheless be possible, depending on the circumstances, to show that the information is exempt under s44(1), on the basis that disclosure would be an unnecessary interference with Article 8 rights.

Applying this in practice

Date

As explained above, we consider that in practice this exemption will rarely be used. However, there may be cases where it is put forward by a public authority; alternatively there may be cases where we have good reasons to think that the information should not be disclosed (e.g. the hypothetical example discussed above) and it is not otherwise exempt. In such cases, as a responsible regulator and as a public authority bound by s6 HRA, we should give it consideration.

We should consider the following:

- Would there be an interference with the rights in Article 8(1) of the Convention? There would have to be some cogent evidence that there would be such interference.
- Would it be in accordance with the law (apart from FOIA)?
- Would disclosure meet one of the legitimate aims listed in Article 8(2)? These include the protections of the right and freedoms of others. The right to information under FOIA is such a right.
- Is disclosure necessary to meet this aim? This means, is there a pressing social need for disclosure?
- Is the disclosure proportionate to the aim? Is there another way to meet the aim that would interfere less with the privacy right?

29/11/2012

Note that while Article 8 is the ECHR right that is most likely to be relevant in s44(1) cases, public authorities may also cite other Convention rights, for example the right to a fair trial in Article 6.

Policy Reference

In any FOIA case where ECHR is being considered as a statutory bar, it is essential to obtain signatory advice.

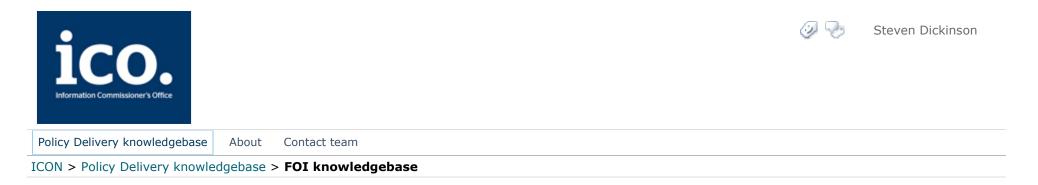

Source	Details
	Counsel opinion (Tim Pitt-Payne) on s41 44 FOIA re deceased 25 09 06
Counsel opinion	MoJ guidance on s44
MoJ guidance	Article 8 ECHR as a statutory bar under s44(1)(a)FOIA
Internal working papers	Article 8 of the European Convention on Human Rights and section 44 of the Freedom of Information Act 2000
Related Lines to Take
Related Documents
Contact	CW

http://intranet.child.indigo.local/FOIKB/pages/FOIPolicyCWAN007.aspx

CWAN 007

http://intranet.child.indigo.local/FOIKB/pages/FOIPolicyCWAN007.aspx

FOI/EIR FOI Section/Regulation s50 Issue Referencing Select Committee opinions and parliamentary proceedings in decision notices.

Line to take:

Following the High Court judgement in Office of Government Commerce v the Information Commissioner & HM Attorney General on behalf of the Speaker of the House of Commons [2008] EWHC 737 (Admin), it is clear that neither the ICO nor the Information Tribunals should rely on the opinion of a Select Committee, since to do so would breach parliamentary privilege. However it is permissible to rely on uncontentious opinions or the terms of reference of such a committee.

Following the Information Tribunal's decision in Gordon v Information Commissioner & Cabinet Office & Speaker of House of Commons (EA/2010/0115), this principle also extends to any doubts or allegations expressed about parliamentary proceedings.

Further Information:

The High Court judgement in Office of Government Commerce v the Information Commissioner & HM Attorney General on behalf of the Speaker of the House of Commons [2008] EWHC 737 (Admin) concerned the subject of gateway reviews of identity cards.

Amongst other issues, the court found that the Information Tribunal had been wrong to rely on the opinion of a Select Committee; this was a breach of parliamentary privilege. The court said, however, that it would be acceptable to refer, for instance, to the terms of reference of a Select Committee or to uncontentious opinions expressed by it, as well as to uncontentious evidence submitted to such a committee.

The reasoning behind this is that if, for example, the Tribunal made a decision in favour of a complainant in which it stated its agreement with the opinion of a Select Committee, then for the public authority respondent to disagree with that decision it would in effect be disagreeing with the Select Committee.

Following Gordon v IC & Cabinet Office & Speaker of House of Commons (EA/2010/0115), the same principle applies to any issues arising from accusations about the truth, motive or good faith of statements made in Parliament; neither the Tribunal nor the Information Commissioner should place any reliance on these.

In more detail

Stanley Burnton J said in the OGC High Court case:

"If it is wrong for a party to rely on the opinion of a Parliamentary Committee, it must be equally wrong for the Tribunal itself to seek to rely on it, since it places the party seeking to persuade the Tribunal to adopt an opinion different from that of the Select Committee in the same unfair position as where it is raised by the opposing party. Furthermore, if the Tribunal either rejects or approves the opinion of the Select Committee it thereby passes judgment on it. To put the same point differently, in raising the possibility of its reliance on the opinion of the Select Committee, the Tribunal potentially made it the subject of submission as to its correctness and of inference, which would be a breach of Parliamentary privilege. This is, in my judgment, the kind of submission or inference, to use the words of 16(3) of the Parliamentary Privileges Act 1987, which is prohibited...."

"......My conclusion does not lead to the exclusion from consideration by the Commissioner or the Tribunal of the opportunity for scrutiny of the acts of public authorities afforded by the work of Parliamentary Select Committees. They may take into account the terms of reference of Committees and the scope and nature of their work as shown by their reports. If the evidence given to a Committee is uncontentious, i.e., the parties to the appeal before the Tribunal agree that it is true and accurate, I see no objection to its being taken into account. What the Tribunal must not do is refer to evidence given to a Parliamentary Committee that is contentious (and it must be treated as such if the parties have not had an opportunity to address it) or to the opinion or finding of the Committee on an issue that the Tribunal has to determine. Nor should the Tribunal seek to assess whether an investigation by a Select Committee, which purports to have been adequate and effective, was in fact so".

In Gordon the case mainly concerned legal professional privilege. However part of the appellant's argument was that a Minister had misled Parliament during the passage of the Finance Act 2008 and that this was a public interest factor in favour of disclosure. As a result of these allegations the Speaker of the House of Commons intervened as he was concerned to ensure that there was no breach of Parliamentary privilege.

The Tribunal summarised: "the core of the Appellant's contentions is the fact that Parliament was in his words 'misled as to the reasons for the legislative change' and "no attempts were made to correct the error even though the error would have been immediately apparent to those advising the minister'. In those circumstances, the Appellant claims that the accuracy of statements made to Parliament 'is just as (if not more) essential to the legislative process as the instruction given to Parliamentary Counsel'". The Tribunal commented: "What is clearly in issue here is a challenge upon the truth, motive and good faith of what was said in the course of Parliamentary proceedings" and it concluded "the Tribunal simply cannot go into any public consideration which touches or concerns such an allegation". In relation to the PIT: "This Tribunal is not going to take into account in any way whatsoever the facts, consequences or possible repercussions of an allegation that a Minister has misled Parliament".

Source	9
--------	---

High Court		erce v the Information Commissioner & HM Commons [2008] EWHC 737 (Admin)	Attorney General on behalf of
Information Tribunal	Gordon v IC & Cabinet Office	& Speaker of House of Commons (EA/201	0/0115)
Related Lines to Take
See ICO guidance on section 34
Related Documents [2008] EWHC 737 (Admin), EA/2010/0115 Contact		VA
Date	28/1/2013	Policy Reference	CWAN 008

Details

http://intranet.child.indigo.local/FOIKB/pages/FOIPolicyCWAN008.aspx

http://intranet.child.indigo.local/FOIKB/pages/FOIPolicyCWAN008.aspx

ico. Information Commissioner's Office	97	Steven Dickinson
Policy Delivery knowledgebase About Contact team
ICON > Policy Delivery knowledgebase > FOI knowledgebase
Section 2

 FOI/EIR
 FOI and EIR Section/Regulation
 Section 2
 Issue
 Handling a suspicion of wrongdoing by a public authority in DNs.

 Line to take:
 Regulation 12(1)(b)

Case officers must take great care when drafting a DN in any case in which there is a suspicion of wrongdoing. If necessary, use a confidential annex rather than run the risk of revealing that there is a smoking gun.

Further Information:

In any case where there is a suspicion of wrongdoing by the public authority, and the content of the information either supports or refutes that suspicion, case officers should consider carefully how to handle this in the drafting of the decision notice. For instance, if we were to give away in the DN that the suspicion is justified ("the smoking gun"), this might reveal the content of the withheld information – which would remove any meaningful right of appeal.

Suggested approach

- The DN could say that there is an additional public interest in disclosure because the information is revealing one way or the other. (NB if the information does not help either way, there is no additional public interest).
- If necessary, use a confidential annex to the DN to reveal whether the information provides evidence either supporting the suspicion or refuting it.
- Case officers should discuss with a signatory the wording of the DN and the use of a confidential annex.

Source	Details
Policy Delivery
Related Lines to Take Related Documents
External FOIA and EIR guidance on the public interest test; former LTT235
Contact		VA
Date	5/03/2013	Policy Reference	CWAN 009

• Information Commissioner's Office intranet

http://intranet.child.indigo.local/FOIKB/pages/FOIPolicyCWAN009.aspx

ic.	o. Isloner's Office		9 P	Steven Dickinson
Policy Delivery	knowledgebase About Contact tear	n
ICON > Policy I	Delivery knowledgebase > FOI know	ledgebase
FOI POLI	CY INTERNAL KNOWL	EDGE BASE
FoI or EIR	Section/Regulation	Issue
FOI EIR	s2, Part II exemptions reg 12, reg 13	Public domain – practical guidance
Summary:	1
	ring the application of exemptions or e ready in the public domain.	exceptions we should conduct a very brief internet search for a	ny relevant

Use discretion when deciding whether more detailed searches or analysis is required.

Take care when referring to parliamentary materials.

Further Information:

This CWAN supplements our guidance on Information in the public domain. It provides some supplementary practical guidance for caseworkers when investigating s50 cases.

Although the guidance explains in detail our approach to a number of common arguments, it will not be necessary or proportionate to go to this level of detail in every case. Many cases are likely to be straightforward.

Do a brief internet search at the start of the case

The question of whether the requested or related information is in the public domain has potential relevance in all cases. Therefore it would be useful to do a short internet search (just a few minutes) at the start of any case where we are considering exemptions. This should also minimise or avoid the issue of relevant information disappearing or depleting during the course of our investigation by flagging up this issue at the earliest opportunity.

In some cases a more thorough search will be required, but we should take a pragmatic approach to deciding whether this is necessary. Ask your line manager or seek signatory input if you are unsure. Generally a proper search will only be needed where:

1. issues about information in the public domain have been specifically raised by one of the parties,

2. the short search throws up evidence of information in the public domain and/or calls into question the public authority's position,

3. it is obvious from the context (taking into account the ICO's sectoral and subject-matter expertise and experience in previous cases) that some relevant information is likely to be in the public domain, or

4. there has been significant media coverage of the relevant issues which suggest that some relevant information is likely to be in the public domain.

Case officers should use their discretion as to whether or not to ask the public authority if it has conducted its own search, as this may not be relevant or appropriate in some cases.

In terms of the search itself, it is suggested that generally case officers spend no more than 20-30 minutes, for example, using multiple search terms via an internet search engine, unless more time is obviously required.

If any information is found:

If relevant information is found after this sort of search, for example, on the internet or in another publically accessible source (eg a published book) - that information is most likely in the public domain as being in practice accessible to a member of the public.

Case officers will then need to double check whether that information was also available at the time of the request before going on to consider its precise content and effect.

Parliamentary materials (eg Hansard or select committee reports)

DNs can refer to Hansard or other parliamentary proceedings (eg committee reports) as evidence of the fact that the information contained within them is already in the public domain. We must however be careful not to make any judgment (positive or negative) about the accuracy of such information, as this risks us breaching rules on parliamentary privilege.

In particular, arguments about misrepresentation or wrongdoing should not be applied to any information reflecting proceedings in parliament. This is because parliamentary privilege prevents the ICO from considering, questioning or relying upon the accuracy or reliability of such information. See also CWAN 008.

Source of Casework Advice Note	Policy Delivery	Details
Related Casework Advice Notes	CWAN 008
Related Documents	ICO guidance: Information in the public domain
Contact: LS
Date: 27/03/2013		Referer	nce number: CWAN 010

• Information Commissioner's Office intranet

Steven Dickinson

I 🖓

Policy Delivery knowledgebase About Contact team

ICON > Policy Delivery knowledgebase > CWAN 011 evidence required to engage s30(1)(a)

	CY INTERNAL KNOWLE	EDGE BASE
FoI or EIR	Section/Regulation	Issue
FOI	s30(1)(a)	Evidence required to engage section 30(1)(a)
Summary:
		to establish whether an offence has occurred will fall within section $30(1)$ a view to ascertaining whether to charge someone with an offence.
	ear if an offence has actually occurred ces that are relevant in the circumstant	I the police need to provide an indication, as far as is possible, of the nces.
If a decision is ((a).	reached that no offence has occurred a	any information generated after that point will not fall within section 30(1)
	es with a duty to investigate a more lir nt to the investigation.	nited number of offences will need to be more specific about the offence or ould consult with the public authority cision notice will not prejudice any on-	to ensure that any details of an offence being investigated which is to be -going investigation.
Further Inform	ation:
	investigate with a view to ascertainin	nonstrate that section $30(1)(a)$ applies, public authorities need to explain og whether to charge someone with an offence arises and to identify the
Police forces
(a). In many ca		provide the information stipulated above in cases involving section $30(1)$ of an investigation which offence or offences they are investigating and offence has act that an offence Commissioner a	ually occurred. For example, in the even may have occurred even if it subseque	under a duty to respond to an incident and to investigate whether an ent of a suspicious death the police will start investigating with the mindset ently transpires that the person died as a result of an accident. The vestigations will fall within section $30(1)(a)$ because the investigation is ne with an offence.
consideration) i where it is uncl	n the circumstances. Given the breadt ear if an offence has actually occurred	ype of offence or offences that are likely to be relevant (ie under th of offences within the police's remit the Commissioner accepts that it will be difficult to be very specific. However we would still expect police of the incident, of the types of offences under consideration.
	f the request, a public authority has y ains unresolved- section 30(1)(a) will	et to conclusively rule out any offence having occurred- so that effectively apply.
		been made that there was no offence, section 30(1)(a) will apply to reached. However it will not apply to information created after that
Other public au	thorities ences. Where they have a limited remit in terms of the offences they more specific about the nature of the offence or offences under
Not all breaches	s of legislation will constitute offences	for the purposes of section 30(1)(a). In contrast to police forces, the

Not all breaches of legislation will constitute offences for the purposes of section 30(1)(a). In contrast to police forces, the Commissioner is unlikely to regularly accept arguments from other public authorities that information about any investigation into compliance with statutory obligations is exempt under section 30(1)(a) because there is a possibility that an offence within the authority's remit may have been committed. To engage section 30(1)(a) public authorities need to provide evidence to demonstrate why, in the circumstances of the case, an offence may have occurred. In other words they need to explain why an investigation is likely to focus on determining whether to charge someone with an offence as opposed to simply determining compliance with statutory obligations.

For example, where offences are only investigated by one department within an authority, it may be reasonable for it to argue that any information about investigations in that department is exempt under section 30(1)(a). However, the Commissioner is unlikely to accept that investigations by other departments into general compliance with other statutory obligations (not offences) will within section 30(1)(a).

Details to be included in a decision notice

Depending on the stage of any investigation, it may be harmful to reveal the offences under consideration in a decision notice. Case officers therefore need to take care and consult with the public authority about the level of detail that can be put in the published decision. As far as possible we should try to avoid using confidential annexes but there may be instances where this is necessary to explain our findings.

Source of Casework Advice Note	Policy Delivery	Details
Related Casework Advice Notes
Related Documents	ICO guidance: Investigations and proce	edings (section 3	30)

http://intranet.child.indigo.local/FOIKB/Pages/CWAN-011-evidence-required-to-engage-s30(1)(a).aspx

Contact: Jo Pedder
Date: 31/05/2013	Reference number: CWAN 011

http://intranet.child.indigo.local/FOIKB/Pages/CWAN-011-evidence-required-to-engage-s30(1)(a).aspx

Steven Dickinson

I 🕹

Policy Delivery knowledgebase About Contact team

ICON > Policy Delivery knowledgebase > CWAN 012/ investigating section 19 and 21(3)

oI or EIR	Section/Regula	tion Is	sue
OI	s19, s21	In	vestigating section 1	9 and 21(3) complaints
Summary:
compliance issuin accordance v in accordance v investigate sec	ues that require inve vith its publication s tion 19 first and read	stigation. The Commis cheme it will be exemp	sioner's position is the st by virtue of sectior ether the public authe	g to provide information inevitably raise section 19 hat where a public authority publishes information a 21(3) by default. Therefore case officers should ority has complied with the model scheme and 3).
Further Inform	nation: is not reasonably accessible by virtue of section 21 he investigation should be on compliance with
is reasonably a	ccessible to the app	licant because it is mad	le available in accord	ent of a fee and which the public authority claims dance with its publication scheme and so is exempt onably accessible to him due to the high level of publication sch under section 2	eme (and any paym 1(3). If a public aut	ent due determined in hority is found to have	accordance with the breached section 19	ormation published in accordance with the scheme) is reasonably accessible to an applicant it also therefore follows that it is unlikely to be his is why section 19 should be considered first.
establish wheth for example, th	er the public author e public authority hat this is likely to be b	ity has in fact done thi as adopted the model s	s. If it has not, this was not is not co	scheme, the investigation should first seek to would be a breach of section 19(1)(a). Similarly, if, mplying with the requirements for fees as set out nority would not be publishing information in publication sch available by ins inspection is lik	eme. For example, a spection. Although the ely to be less access er this means of pul eme does recognise	a complainant may argune information may obj sible than if the information is permitted in	ue that information i ectively be less acce ation were copied an the model publication	ived about the accessibility of information in a s not reasonably accessible because it is only ssible (by definition information available only via d sent to the applicant), caseworkers should on scheme. Note that the wording of the model le for information to be made available by publication sch inspection only	work Advice Note	Policy Delivery	Details publication sch inspection only Source of Case		Policy Delivery	Details publication sch inspection only Source of Case	work Advice Note ork Advice Notes	LTT026 Model publication sch ICO guidance:	neme	applicant (section 21)
publication sch inspection only Source of Case Related Casew	work Advice Note ork Advice Notes	LTT026 Model publication sch ICO guidance:	neme	applicant (section 21)

• Information Commissioner's Office intranet

http://intranet.child.indigo.local/FOIKB/Pages/CWAN-012-investigating-section-19-and-21(3).aspx

Steven Dickinson

I 🖓

and assistance

Policy Delivery knowledgebase About Contact team

ICON > Policy Delivery knowledgebase > CWAN 013/ drafting DN steps

		OWLEDGE BASE
FoI or EIR	Section/Regulation	Issue
FOI EIR	s50 reg 18	Drafting DN steps
	Teg 10
Summary:
Avoid any steps o PA to:	ordering a PA to disclose or r	refuse (or just to disclose) "the requested information". Instead, DNs should order a r refuse) identified informa sh response under FOIA or t
Further Informa	tion:
second DN in app ensure that a PA legislation. If so,	ropriate cases. In particular has technically complied wit	enable clarity over whether the PA has complied with the DN, and allow us to issue a r, we need to avoid the problem in the Charman case – in other words, we need to the DN once it provides a response which, on its face, is permitted under the aints about new elements of that response as a new s50 case. See the policy ation.
information other identified all infor taken for all the r compliance investion	wise defined by reference to mation falling within the sco equested information. Any l	we order a PA to take steps in relation to " the requested information" (or o the wording of the request), but we do not yet know whether the PA has correctly ope of the request. This means that we cannot be sure whether the step has been later dispute about the scope of request, or held/not held, would have to be a DN 50 case. This interferes with our internal casework procedures and undermines the describe or list th	ed to identify the relevant ir e information (eg in an anne	nformation without referring back to the request itself. DNs should either clearly ex), identify it by reference to the PA's actions (eg the information refused under describe or list th s42, the informat to "the requested The table below s	ed to identify the relevant ir e information (eg in an anne ion the PA identified as fallir information". suggests appropriate wording	ex), identify it by reference to the PA's actions (eg the information refused under ng within the scope of the request), or otherwise order a response without referring describe or list th s42, the informat to "the requested The table below s should always co	ed to identify the relevant ir e information (eg in an anne ion the PA identified as fallir information". suggests appropriate wording	ex), identify it by reference to the PA's actions (eg the information refused under ng within the scope of the request), or otherwise order a response without referring g for steps in common types of DNs. This provides a starting point, but case officers describe or list th s42, the informat to "the requested The table below s should always co Type of DN	ed to identify the relevant ir e information (eg in an anne ion the PA identified as fallir information". suggests appropriate wording nsider how best to tailor this Steps	ex), identify it by reference to the PA's actions (eg the information refused under ng within the scope of the request), or otherwise order a response without referring g for steps in common types of DNs. This provides a starting point, but case officers s wording to the individual circumstances of each case.
describe or list th s42, the informat to "the requested The table below s should always con Type of DN Non-response	ed to identify the relevant ir e information (eg in an anne ion the PA identified as fallir information". suggests appropriate wording nsider how best to tailor this Steps • iss ponse • iss	ex), identify it by reference to the PA's actions (eg the information refused under ng within the scope of the request), or otherwise order a response without referring g for steps in common types of DNs. This provides a starting point, but case officers s wording to the individual circumstances of each case.
describe or list th s42, the informat to "the requested The table below s should always con Type of DN Non-response Inadequate res	ed to identify the relevant ir e information (eg in an anne ion the PA identified as fallir information". suggests appropriate wording nsider how best to tailor this Steps • iss applies	ex), identify it by reference to the PA's actions (eg the information refused under ng within the scope of the request), or otherwise order a response without referring g for steps in common types of DNs. This provides a starting point, but case officers s wording to the individual circumstances of each case.
describe or list th s42, the informat to "the requested The table below s should always con Type of DN Non-response Inadequate res Wrong regime	ed to identify the relevant ir e information (eg in an anne ion the PA identified as fallir information". suggests appropriate wording nsider how best to tailor this Steps • iss applies • iss	ex), identify it by reference to the PA's actions (eg the information refused under ng within the scope of the request), or otherwise order a response without referring g for steps in common types of DNs. This provides a starting point, but case officers s wording to the individual circumstances of each case. sue a response under FOIA or the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which applies) sue a fresh response under FOIA or the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which applies) sue a response under FOIA or the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which applies) sue a response under FOIA or the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which applies)
describe or list th s42, the informat to "the requested The table below s should always con Type of DN Non-response Inadequate res Wrong regime Held /not held	ed to identify the relevant ir e information (eg in an anne ion the PA identified as fallir information". suggests appropriate wording nsider how best to tailor this Steps • iss ponse • iss applies • iss • iss	ex), identify it by reference to the PA's actions (eg the information refused under ng within the scope of the request), or otherwise order a response without referring g for steps in common types of DNs. This provides a starting point, but case officers s wording to the individual circumstances of each case. Sue a response under FOIA or the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which applies) Sue a fresh response under FOIA or the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which applies) Sue a response under FOIA or the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which applies) Sue a response under FOIA / the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which applies) Sue a response under FOIA / the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which applies)
describe or list th s42, the informat to "the requested The table below s should always con Type of DN Non-response Inadequate res Wrong regime Held / not held search	ed to identify the relevant ir e information (eg in an anne ion the PA identified as fallir information". suggests appropriate wording nsider how best to tailor this Steps • iss applies • iss - inadequate We sho searche use an	ex), identify it by reference to the PA's actions (eg the information refused under ng within the scope of the request), or otherwise order a response without referring g for steps in common types of DNs. This provides a starting point, but case officers s wording to the individual circumstances of each case. Sue a response under FOIA or the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which applies) Sue a fresh response under FOIA or the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which)
describe or list th s42, the informat to "the requested The table below s should always con Type of DN Non-response Inadequate res Wrong regime Held / not held search Rejecting proce	ed to identify the relevant ir e information (eg in an anne ion the PA identified as fallir information". suggests appropriate wording nsider how best to tailor this Steps • iss applies • iss - inadequate we sho searche use an	ex), identify it by reference to the PA's actions (eg the information refused under ng within the scope of the request), or otherwise order a response without referring g for steps in common types of DNs. This provides a starting point, but case officers s wording to the individual circumstances of each case. Sue a response under FOIA or the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which applies) Sue a fresh response under FOIA or the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which applies) Sue a response under FOIA / the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which) Sue a response under FOIA / the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which) Sue a response under FOIA / the EIR) Sue a response under FOIA / the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which) Sue a response under FOIA / the EIR) Sue a fresh response under FOIA / the EIR without relying on s12 / s14 /
describe or list th s42, the informat to "the requested The table below s should always con Type of DN Non-response Inadequate res Wrong regime Held / not held search Rejecting proce	ed to identify the relevant ir e information (eg in an anne ion the PA identified as fallir information". suggests appropriate wording nsider how best to tailor this Steps • iss applies • iss - inadequate we sho searche use an odural • iss regular	ex), identify it by reference to the PA's actions (eg the information refused under ng within the scope of the request), or otherwise order a response without referring g for steps in common types of DNs. This provides a starting point, but case officers s wording to the individual circumstances of each case. Sue a response under FOIA or the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which applies) Sue a fresh response under FOIA or the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which applies) Sue a response under FOIA / the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which applies) Sue a response under FOIA / the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which) Sue a response under FOIA / the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which) Sue a response under FOIA / the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which) Sue a fresh response under FOIA / the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which) Sue a fresh seconder FOIA / the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which applies) Sue a fresh response under FOIA / the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which applies) Sue a fresh response under FOIA / the EIR without relying on s12 / s14 / tion 12(4)(b) / regulation 12(4)(c) (delete as appropriate)
describe or list th s42, the informat to "the requested The table below s should always con Type of DN Non-response Inadequate res Wrong regime Held / not held search Rejecting proce	ed to identify the relevant ir e information (eg in an anne ion the PA identified as fallir information". suggests appropriate wording nsider how best to tailor this Steps • iss applies • iss applies • iss applies • iss searche use an • iss • iss	ex), identify it by reference to the PA's actions (eg the information refused under ng within the scope of the request), or otherwise order a response without referring g for steps in common types of DNs. This provides a starting point, but case officers s wording to the individual circumstances of each case. Sue a response under FOIA or the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which applies) Sue a fresh response under FOIA or the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which applies) Sue a response under FOIA or the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which) Sue a response under FOIA / the EIR wuld not generally use a DN in these circumstances. If a PA needs to conduct further tes for information, and a formal step is necessary to progress the case, we should IN instead. See also LTT193. Sue a fresh response under FOIA / the EIR without relying on s12 / s14 / tion 12(4)(b) / regulation 12(4)(c) (delete as appropriate) sue a fresh response under the EIR without relying on regulation 12(4)(b) ,
describe or list th s42, the informat to "the requested The table below s should always con Type of DN Non-response Inadequate res Wrong regime Held / not held search Rejecting proce	ed to identify the relevant ir e information (eg in an anne ion the PA identified as fallir information". suggests appropriate wording nsider how best to tailor this Steps • iss ponse • iss applies • iss - inadequate We sho searche use an odural • iss regular • iss	ex), identify it by reference to the PA's actions (eg the information refused under ng within the scope of the request), or otherwise order a response without referring g for steps in common types of DNs. This provides a starting point, but case officers s wording to the individual circumstances of each case. Sue a response under FOIA or the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which applies) Sue a fresh response under FOIA or the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which applies) Sue a response under FOIA or the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which) Sue a response under FOIA / the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which) Sue a response under FOIA / the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which) Sue a response under FOIA / the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which) Sue a response under FOIA / the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which) Sue a response under FOIA / the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which) Sue a fresh response under FOIA / the EIR without relying on s12 / s14 / tion 12(4)(b) / regulation 12(4)(c) (delete as appropriate) Sue a fresh response under the EIR without relying on regulation 12(4)(b), Sue a fresh response under the EIR without relying on regulation 12(4)(b), Sue a fresh response under the EIR without relying on regulation 12(4)(b), describe or list th s42, the informat to "the requested The table below s should always con Type of DN Non-response Inadequate res Wrong regime Held /not held	ed to identify the relevant in e information (eg in an anne ion the PA identified as fallin information". suggests appropriate wording nsider how best to tailor this Steps • iss ponse • iss applies • iss - inadequate We sho searche use an edural • iss unless unreas purely of	ex), identify it by reference to the PA's actions (eg the information refused under ng within the scope of the request), or otherwise order a response without referring g for steps in common types of DNs. This provides a starting point, but case officers s wording to the individual circumstances of each case. sue a response under FOIA or the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which applies) sue a fresh response under FOIA or the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which applies) sue a response under FOIA or the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which) sue a response under FOIA / the EIR build not generally use a DN in these circumstances. If a PA needs to conduct further es for information, and a formal step is necessary to progress the case, we should IN instead. See also LTT193. sue a fresh response under FOIA / the EIR without relying on s12 / s14 / tion 12(4)(b) / regulation 12(4)(c) (delete as appropriate) sue a fresh response under the EIR without relying on regulation 12(4)(b), engaged on the basis that the costs of compliance would be manifestly sonable (if rejecting EIR manifestly unreasonable arguments which are focussed on value / purpose of request, but we consider it would be unfair on the PA to describe or list th s42, the informat to "the requested The table below s should always con Type of DN Non-response Inadequate res Wrong regime Held /not held search Rejecting proce	ed to identify the relevant ir e information (eg in an anne ion the PA identified as fallir information". suggests appropriate wording nsider how best to tailor this Steps • iss applies • iss - inadequate We sho searche use an edural • iss purely of prevent	ex), identify it by reference to the PA's actions (eg the information refused under ng within the scope of the request), or otherwise order a response without referring g for steps in common types of DNs. This provides a starting point, but case officers s wording to the individual circumstances of each case. sue a response under FOIA or the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which applies) sue a fresh response under FOIA or the EIR (pick one regime if obvious which applies) sue a response under FOIA / the EIR build not generally use a DN in these circumstances. If a PA needs to conduct further es for information, and a formal step is necessary to progress the case, we should IN instead. See also LTT193. Sue a fresh response under FOIA / the EIR without relying on s12 / s14 / tion 12(4)(b) / regulation 12(4)(c) (delete as appropriate) sue a fresh response under the EIR without relying on regulation 12(4)(b), engaged on the basis that the costs of compliance would be manifestly sonable (if rejecting EIR manifestly unreasonable arguments which are focussed

			/ 1 3
Rejecting NCND	-	 confirm or deny whether information falling within the scope of the request is held, and disclose of	or refuse any in	formation identified
Fully investigated – ordering	disclose specified information (eg listed in annex), or disclosure	disclose the information	disclose the information withheld under sXX, or
	• disclose the requested information (only if satisfied that the PA has identified all relevant information)
	Note that in fully investigated cases we should generally ensure that the scope of the request is clearly understood and the PA has identified all relevant information. In other words that we are satisfied that on a balance of probabilities nothing further is held. In these cases it may be appropriate to simply order disclosure of the requested information.
Source of Casework Advice Note	Policy Delivery	Details
Related Casework Advice Notes	LTT187 , LTT189 , LTT19	0 , L TT192 , L TT19	3
Related Documents	Tribunal summary: Charman v IC & ODA (EA/2011/0210, 27 April 2012)
Contact: LS
Date: 14/06/2013		Referen	ce number: CWAN 013

This step can only be included if we have established that the request can actually be refined. And in many cases this can be done as part of the investigation rather than in a

DN. Only consider a DN if absolutely necessary to progress the case.

request within the cost limit

http://intranet.child.indigo.local/FOIKB/Pages/CWAN-013-drafting-DN-steps.aspx

•		I 🖓 😓	Steven Dickinson
Information Commissioner's Office
Policy Delivery knowledgebase About	Contact team
ICON > Policy Delivery knowledgebase	CWAN014
EOL DOL LOV INTERNAL

FOI POLICY INTERNAL KNOWLEDGE BASE
FoI or EIR	Section/Regulat	tion	Issue
FOI	S40(1)		Applicant's perse	onal data
Summary:			1
• If a reque	st is only for the ap	pplicant's personal data it s	should be consider	ed under the DPA, not FOIA.
∘ We uph app ∘ In a	can issue a s12/s1 old the procedural ropriately under th held/ not held cas	4 notice without establishi exemption or not, the put e DPA and FOIA.	ng which informat lic authority must nformation is held	applicant's personal data, then: ion is the applicant's personal data. Whether we still deal with the applicant's personal data we should tell the public authority to deal with the
Further Informa	tion:
This Advice Note	is relevant to case	s involving the applicant's	own personal data	a and procedural exemptions (s1, s12, s14).
• Request i	is only for applica	ant's personal data
the complainant	insists upon a DN,			r the complaint under the DPA and not under FOIA. If nformation is the applicant's personal data, then we
• Hybrid re	quest or not clea	r ta and other data), or where it isn't clear whether all en the position is as follows:
∘ Sec	tion 12/section :	14
A s12 or 14 DN information isn't.		out first establishing whic	h information is th	e applicant's own personal data and which regardless of the	Commissioner's fi		till have an obligat	s section should advise the public authority that ion to consider whether the applicant's own personal s12/s14. We sho that constitutes t	ould however put the	ne public authority on noti f the applicant (or would o	ce that we will exp	e to issue a fresh response without relying on bect it to apply s40(5) in relation to any information ere held) and to deal with this information under the
• Hel	d/ not held
whether it should authority on noti deal with this inf	d be released or no ce that we will exp ormation under the	 In these cases we shou ect it to NCND whether an subject access provisions 	ld again issue a Di y of the informatic of the DPA.	t more information is held but don't go on to consider N that orders a fresh response and puts the public on is the applicant's personal data under s40(5) and er information is held, see LTT193.
Source of Casew	ork Advice Note	Policy Delivery	Details	Based on decision taken at signatories meeting 21/06/2011; see Briefing for signatories - Policy trends in decision notices (April-May) 20110628

	LTT193
Related Documents	ICO guidance: Personal information Neither confirm nor deny in relation to personal data
Contact: CW
Date: 05/07/2013	Reference number: CWAN 014

Related Casework Advice Notes

CWAN013

I 🖓

Steven Dickinson

Policy Delivery knowledgebase About Contact team

ICON > Policy Delivery knowledgebase > CWAN015

FOI POLICY I	NTERNA	L KNOWLEDGE	BASE
FoI or EIR Se	ection/Regulati	on	Issue
FOI S4 EIR R1			Sensitive persor	nal data and fairness
Summary:			1
		tive personal data of a th used in DNs in such case		nost cases it will be unfair to disclose it. We	e have
If we find that disclose satisfied.	sure of sensitive	e personal data would be	fair, we then have	to establish that Schedule 3 condition 1 or	r 5 is
Further Information:	:
personal data, as defi expectation that the in them. For example, it expectation that medi	ined in section nformation wou t is almost self- ical information e will be damage	2(a)-(h) of the DPA. If s Ild not be disclosed and f evident that to disclose will remain confidential,	o, then in the majo furthermore the co someone's medica both to preserve t	tablish whether the requested information is prity of cases the data subject will have a re- nsequences of disclosure could be distressi I records will be unfair as in our society the the relationship between doctor and patient the majority of cases we are therefore likely	easonable ing to ere is a clear t and also
In such cases, where in the DN:-	we find that di	sclosure of sensitive pers	onal data would be	e unfair, the following standard wording ca	an be used relates to the d individuals rega	data subject's ard as the mos letrimental or d	(complete). As such t private information abo listressing effect (*) on ti	n, by its very natur ut themselves. Fu	(complete) of the Data Protection Act 199 e, this has been deemed to be information rther, as disclosure of this type of informat e Commissioner considers that it would be	that tion is likely
(*) – It might be poss	sible to be more	e specific or use stronger	language in certai	in circumstances.
disclosure of some set	nsitive persona a subject has c	l data; the guidance doc onsented to the disclosu	ument gives the ex	data. A data subject may have no objectio cample of the political opinions of a Membe nade the information public themselves, the	er of document, we then had data subject consented	ave to establish ed to it, then co	n that a Schedule 3 condi	tion is satisfied. If ed; if we found that	ollowing the approach set out in the guidan we found that disclosure would be fair beca t it was fair because the data subject delibe fied.	ause the
Source of Casework A		Policy Delivery	Details
Related Casework Ad	lvice Notes	100
Related Documents		ICO guidance: Personal information
Contact: CW	I
Date: 08/07/2013			Refere	nce number: CWAN 015

• Information Commissioner's Office intranet

http://intranet.child.indigo.local/FOIKB/Pages/CWAN015.aspx

Steven Dickinson

Policy Delivery knowledgebase

About Contact team

ICON > Policy Delivery knowledgebase > CWAN016

	Y INTERNAL KNOWLEDG
FoI or EIR	Section/Regulation	Issue
FOI EIR	S40 R13	Considering whether disclosure of personal data would be lawful
Summary:
Disclosure i agreement.Case officer	s not lawful if it would breach statute or o	re would be fair and meet a Schedule 2/3 condition. common law, a duty of confidence or an enforceable contractual e lawful unless there is some evidence in the case to suggest it may not be s finding in relation to compromise agreements in Gibson EA/2010/0095
Further Informat	ion:
In s40 cases, if it f relevant), case (officers should then decide whether the d	yould be fair and meet a Schedule 2 condition (and a Schedule 3 condition isclosure would be lawful. If they have already found that disclosure would en the personal data is exempt and they do not need to consider
The meaning of Our guidance docu	`lawful' ument on personal information explains w	vhat is meant by `lawful':
	sclosure that would breach an implied or o	criminal or civil. This includes industry-specific legislation or regulations. explicit duty of confidence or an enforceable contractual agreement would each the right to privacy in Article 8 of the Human Rights Act would also be re would already have been found to be unfair.
		Il unless there is some evidence in the case to suggest it may not be. This the PA has suggested t claimed the 	suggested it would be a breach of confide his specifically in the context of s40 or, if	or of other law have arisen in our consideration of fairness/ schedules, or ence or of a contractual term or unlawful in another way. They may have f not, they may have claimed s41 or s44; if either of these exemptions are n to s40. If the case is EIR then claims of r12(5) (d), (e) or (f) may raise ender r13.
However, there m	ay be cases in which the PA has not claim	eas of law that we do not regulate in order to look for a potential breach. ned s40 but as regulator we consider it may be engaged. In such a case if en we should seek the PA's view on lawfulness.
Case officers will r necessary.	need to consider carefully any arguments	about lawfulness put forward by the PA, and obtain legal advice if or contractual agr the First Tier Tribu compromise agree	Id be aware of one particular case which eement is not sufficient to render a disclo unal found that, despite of the existence of ement. The Commissioner disagrees with	complainants may cite when arguing that breaching a duty of confidence osure unlawful. In Gibson v IC and Craven District Council EA/2010/0095 of a confidentiality clause, it would be lawful to disclose some parts of a the Tribunal's findings in this case because he remains satisfied that, because of the nature of the information in question, it was truly confidential and therefore to disclose the information would both breach an explicit duty of confidence and an enforceable contractual agreement. Even if the Commissioner agreed with the Tribunal on the facts of the case, he would not accept that the Gibson decision could be read as establishing a general rule that disclosure in breach of a duty of confidence or an enforceable contractual agreement would be lawful.

In other words, despite Gibson, the Commissioner's view remains that a disclosure in breach of a duty of confidence or an enforceable contractual agreement would be unlawful.

It should be noted that in Gibson, as in other such cases, the compromise agreement would have been jointly created between the public authority and the employee. Therefore s41 would not have been applicable because the Commissioner would not have accepted that the information was provided to the public authority by a third party. In such cases case officers should be prepared to consider arguments presented in respect to confidentiality when analysing both fairness and lawfulness under s40.

Source of Casework Advice Note	Policy Delivery	Details
Related Casework Advice Notes
Related Documents	ICO guidance: Personal information
Contact: CW
Date: 10/07/2013		Referen	nce number:	CWAN 016

• Information Commissioner's Office intranet

I 🖓 🕞 –

Steven Dickinson

Policy Delivery knowledgebase About Contact team

ICON > Policy Delivery knowledgebase > CWAN017

FOI POLICY	Y INTERNAL KNOWLEDGE	BASE
FoI or EIR	Section/Regulation	Issue
Both	S40, R13	Consent
Summary:		I
	ubject consents to the disclosure of their per e will generally be fair and can also be used	sonal data within the time for statutory compliance with the request, to satisfy Schedule 2, condition 1.
in expression of t		ke the data subject's comments into account insofar as they represent he request had they given any thought to the issue at that time and
Further Informat	ion:
	ere the data subject has consented to disclo	in cases involving section 40 or regulation 13. It explains how to deal sure (within or outside the time for compliance) or has not consented his is relevant to	the assessment of both fairness and Schedu	ule conditions under Principle 1 DPA.
Saaling with as
-	nsent scenarios:
-	by the public authority, the data subject
		ersonal data, an informal resolution is more likely. However, if it is Commissioner will adopt the following approach:
) Where a dat Iformed consent		eir personal data, it is useful to consider the following to ensure that any
Was the conse	subject fully aware that they were consenting nt explicit (particularly where sensitive perso subject vulnerable in some way e.g. age?
A/2008/0065, 28		e Creekside Forum v IC & the Department for Culture, Media and Sport e been appropriate to have had evidence clarifying the circumstances
	nformed consent is in place at the time c vant to include the following standard parag	of request or within the time for statutory compliance then the raph:
compliance with ti lata subject was a	his request. The Commissioner is satisfied t	to the disclosure of their personal data within the time for statutory hat the consent was freely given and informed and in particular that the fectively to the world at large. As such, the Commissioner considers nce.
he Commissione	r also considers that this consent can satisfy	Schedule 2 condition 1."
aken into accoun ield at the time o	t in considering fairness, insofar as it repres f the request had they given any thought to	side the time for statutory compliance , then that response can be ents an expression of the views of the data subject which they already the issue at that time. In other words, the data subject already held ight when they were asked for their consent.
	nsent was given outside the time for statuto edule 3 condition 1.	bry compliance, it is not valid consent for the purposes of Schedule 2,

(iv) Where a complainant indicates that the data subject has consented to the disclosure of their personal data, the Commissioner would need to confirm that this consent was genuine. This may require the public authority checking with the data subject or confirming the authenticity of the email or letter containing the consent. Once this has been confirmed, then points (i) to (iii) above

(2) The data subject HAS NOT consented to disclosure (or the data subject has not been asked to give consent) (*)

Where the data subject has expressed a refusal to consent to the disclosure of their personal data either within the time for statutory compliance or at some later date, then the Commissioner will adopt the following approach when considering fairness:

(i) The expression of a refusal to consent is not absolutely determinative in the decision as to whether the data subject's personal data will be disclosed.

(ii) Instead, the data subject's comments will be taken into account insofar as they represent an expression of the views which they held at the time of the request had they given any thought to the issue at that time. In other words the data subject already had these views at the time of the request but these views only came to light when they were asked for their consent. As such, the data subject's views can be taken into account in any analysis of fairness.

However, as part of the fairness analysis includes a consideration of the data subject's reasonable expectations, a data subject may argue that their expectations have been shaped or reinforced by the process of seeking, and their refusing to provide, consent.

The Commissioner's view is that where a data subject refuses consent this will be based on how they already feel about the information even though they may not have actively considered their views on a potential disclosure and thus the act of seeking consent simply prompts the data subject to consciously form a view on the issue of disclosure and to articulate that view to the public authority. Therefore although the refusal of consent can be seen as a reflection of the expectations of the data subject, it should not be seen as something that affects or informs those expectations.

http://intranet.child.indigo.local/FOIKB/Pages/CWAN017.aspx

It also remains important to still consider whether it is reasonable for the data subject to object to the disclosure. In some cases, it may also be possible for the data subject to provide details of the reasons why their individual circumstances may affect fairness, or shed light onto the circumstances which may lead the public authority to conclude that the data subject had a reasonable expectation that the information would remain confidential.

Therefore, the Commissioner will not give any further weight or consider that the data subject's expectations have been reinforced where the public authority has returned to the data subject claiming to be seeking their 'consent' but will take into account the additional detail provided by the data subject as to the circumstances and issues that existed at the time of the request.

If it is necessary to consider Schedule conditions (because disclosure would be fair) then the fact that the data subject has not given their consent means that Schedule 2 Condition 1 or Schedule 3 Condition 1 are not satisfied. However, other conditions may be relevant, ie Schedule 2 condition 6 or Schedule 3 condition 5.

(*) – This should not be confused with cases involving s.10 DPA notices.

Whether to seek consent

There is no obligation on a public authority to seek the data subject's consent to disclosure.

It is up to the case-officer to decide whether it would be useful to suggest to the public authority that the views of the data subject be sought as in borderline cases or those involving a small number of data subjects, it may be worth pursuing this point. However, in other cases where a large number of data subjects are involved or where it may over-complicate the investigation and any decision notice, it may be impractical or a disproportionate use of public funds to pursue this point.

In the EIR case of De Mello v IC and the Environment Agency EA/2008/0054 11 December 2008, the Tribunal commented:

"50. The Tribunal has, however, some sympathy with the Appellant's point that -- in this kind of situation -- a check by the EA with the original complainant, to see whether there was any objection to releasing the letter, might have resolved the situation and saved a significant cost to the public (even in the limited circumstances of a paper hearing of the appeal). It may be that the EA and other such public bodies wish to review their initial procedures in situations such as this -- not because it is a matter of law but simply because it is a matter of common sense -- but that is a matter for them. There may well be cost implications that make such procedures difficult to introduce but, if the writer of a letter of complaint is happy for it and the personal data within it to be disclosed in the end, anything that saves public bodies and Appellant's such as Mr de Mello from having to spend time and effort debating the disclosure of such information should be encouraged".

Source of Casework Advice Note	Policy Delivery	Details
Related Casework Advice Notes
Related Documents	ICO guidance: Personal information
Contact: CW
Date: 10/07/2013		Referen	nce number: CWAN 017

• Information Commissioner's Office intranet

http://intranet.child.indigo.local/FOIKB/Pages/CWAN017.aspx

Steven Dickinson

Policy Delivery knowledgebase

About Contact team

ICON > Policy Delivery knowledgebase > CWAN018

FOI POLICY	Y INTERNAL KNOWLEDGE	BASE
FoI or EIR	Section/Regulation	Issue
Both	S40(4) R13(3)	Information exempt from the subject access right
Summary:
	y to consider the exemption in section 40(4 has been raised by the public authority.) FOIA/ regulation 13(3) EIR (for information exempt from the subject
If the public autho first.	rity does apply s40(4)/r13(3), case officers	should point out that it may be simpler to consider other exemptions
	rity continues to rely on s40(4)/r13(3) then engaged and, if so, the balance of the public	case officers should establish which DPA exemption is being relied on c interest under FOIA/EIR.
	s40(4)/r13(3) does not apply, it may be nec rinciples under s40(3)/r13(2).	essary for case officers to proactively consider whether disclosure would
Further Informat	ion:
When is it neces	sary to consider s 40(4)/ r13(3) in FOI	case work?
expectation that c	ase officers should pro-actively consider this	cases where it has been claimed by a public authority. There is no sexemption/ exception (and by implication pro-actively consider the data subject were to request the information) if it has not been on Information ex exemptions in sec consider other FOI	empt from the subject access right. This poi tion 40(3)/ regulation 13(2), for disclosure t	public authority it is appropriate to refer the authority to our guidance nts out (at paragraph 35) that it may be simpler to consider first the that would contravene DP Principles. It may also be appropriate to of the exemptions from the subject access right in DPA relate to ions.
		on section 40(4)/ regulation 13(3). If it continues to claim it however, see another exemption has already been upheld).
If it is appropria	te to consider s40(4)/ r13(3), then hov	v detailed does the analysis of the DPA exemption need to be?
	persuaded to withdraw its reliance upon sec se officers will need to consider it.	tion 40(4)/ regulation 13(3) in favour of applying another exemption/
Our Subject Acces	s Code of Practice (chapter 9) gives guidance	ce on the main exemptions from the subject access right.
It will be necessar the information in		der the DPA exists, but also that the exemption would actually apply to
In essence the dep	oth of analysis required will be similar to tha	at applied to FOI exemptions and will entail :
	exemption is class-based – establishing infor exemption is prejudice-based - establishing t and then:
 carrying out 	t the public interest test as set out in section	n 2/ regulation 13(3).

Proactive application of section 40(3) / regulation 13(2)

If it is appropriate to consider a public authority's s40(4) claim, but it is found that s40(4) does not apply, then, in light of the Commissioner role as regulator of the DPA, it may still be necessary to pro-actively consider whether disclosure would contravene DPA principles under section 40(3)/ regulation 13(2).

In this situation the argument may be made that releasing personal into the public domain under FOIA, when a data subject cannot gain access to the same information under the DPA, is unfair processing and thus contravenes the first data protection principle.

The Commissioner accepts that this will often be the case, but considers that it is also possible for the processing to be fair in the particular circumstances of the case. In the Lord Ashcroft case FS50197952 he found the processing to be fair, and to meet schedule 2 condition 6 of the DPA even though the information in question was not available to the data subject under the DPA.

Source of Casework Advice Note	Policy Delivery	Details
Related Casework Advice Notes
Related Documents	ICO guidance: Information exempt from the subject access right Subject access code of practice
Contact: CW
Date: 10/07/2013		Reference number: CWAN 018

http://intranet.child.indigo.local/FOIKB/Pages/CWAN018.aspx

http://intranet.child.indigo.local/FOIKB/Pages/CWAN018.aspx

