

Savanta Survey

Q1. Please read the example below:

Person 1 works for a high street shop and served Person 2 when they purchased an item. Person 2 gave their email address to be sent the receipt. Person 1 then contacted Person 2 to say they thought they were good looking and ask them to go on a date.

Has anyone ever used your personal information (phone number, name, email address etc.), given to them for a business reason, to approach you with a romantic or sexual proposition?

- a. Yes
- b. No
- c. Don't know/not sure

Q2. Please read the example below:

Person 1 works for a high street shop and served Person 2 when they purchased an item. Person 2 gave their email address to be sent the receipt. Person 1 then contacted Person 2 to say they thought they were good looking and ask them to go on a date.

Do you think using someone's personal information (phone number, name, email address etc.) provided for a business reason, to contact them with a romantic or sexual proposition is legal, illegal, or a matter of personal judgement?

- a. Legal
- b. Illegal
- c. A matter of personal judgement and not covered by the law
- d. Don't know/ not sure

Q3. Please read the example below:

Person 1 works for a high street shop and served Person 2 when they purchased an item. Person 2 gave their email address to be sent the receipt. Person 1 then contacted Person 2 to say they thought they were good looking and ask them to go on a date.

What is your view of using someone's personal information (phone number, name, email address etc.) provided for a business reason, to contact them with a romantic or sexual proposition?

- a. It is not morally right
- b. It is neither right nor wrong
- c. It is morally right
- d. Don't know/ not sure