

Freedom of Information Act 2000 (FOIA)

Decision notice

Date: 27 May 2025

Public Authority: British Broadcasting Corporation (BBC)
Address: BBC Broadcasting House
Portland Place
London
W1A 1A

Decision (including any steps ordered)

1. The complainant requested information from the BBC about the costs of covering the 2024 US presidential election. The BBC responded that the requested information was covered by the derogation and hence excluded from FOIA.
2. The Commissioner's decision is that this information, if held at all, is held by the BBC for the purposes of journalism, art or literature and so is not covered by FOIA. He therefore upholds the BBC's position and requires no steps to be taken in this case.

Request and response

3. On 8 November 2024, the complainant wrote to the public authority and requested information in the following terms:
 - "1) A list of presenters from the BBC who were employed in America for the latest presidential election.
 - 2) Whether they are based in America or were flown out and the cost of the flights and accommodation for each.
 - 3) A total cost of any other staff sent out there to assist in televising, radio reporting, producing etc.

- 4) The role that the presenter was responsible for.”
4. On 22 November 2024 the BBC responded to the request. The BBC explained that it believed that the information would be held for the purposes of “art, journalism or literature” and would therefore not be caught by FOIA. As a result, the BBC did not consider it was obliged to provide the information.

Reasons for decision

5. The following analysis covers whether the information requested is excluded from FOIA because it was held for the purposes of “journalism, art or literature”.
6. FOIA only applies to the BBC to a limited extent. Schedule One, Part VI of FOIA provides that the BBC is a public authority for the purposes of FOIA but it only has to deal with requests for information in some circumstances. The entry relating to the BBC states:
- “The British Broadcasting Corporation, in respect of information held for purposes other than those of journalism, art or literature.”
7. This is known as the “derogation”. This means that information that the BBC holds for the purposes of journalism, art or literature - in broad terms, its output or related to its output – is not covered by FOIA. If information falls within the derogation, then that is the end of the matter; there is no public interest test or similar provision to consider the merits of disclosure.
8. Although it is publicly funded through the licence fee, the BBC competes with other commercial broadcasters who are not subject to FOIA. Releasing information about its output, or related to its output, could therefore commercially disadvantage the BBC. However, for the derogation to apply, the BBC does not need to demonstrate that it would suffer commercial harm if the information were to be disclosed. It only has to demonstrate that the information is held for a derogated purpose.
9. Broadly, BBC information that is covered by FOIA includes information about: how the BBC is managed and run, including the TV licence; the BBC’s employees and its human resources practices; and the BBC’s performance.
10. BBC information that is not covered by FOIA includes the following: information about the BBC’s on-screen or on-air “talent” including its presenters and journalists; information about BBC programmes including any spend or editorial decisions associated with its programming; materials that support the BBC's output, such as the script of a television programme or a source drawn on for an investigation; and viewer and listener complaints to the BBC about the above.

11. The complainant argued that the information ought to be disclosed because it didn't relate to anything the BBC had broadcasted.
12. Information about the amount spent on covering a particular story, if held at all, is derogated information. This type of information would be associated with the BBC's output because it is about how the BBC allocates its resources in order to provide coverage of a particular story or series of stories. Decisions on how many and which staff to allocate to a story is inherently an editorial and therefore a journalistic decision. It influences not just the material that can be gathered for broadcast but also the selection of those materials for broadcast.
13. The Commissioner is satisfied, based on the very well established precedent set in the numerous other decisions he has made in cases involving the BBC, that, if held at all, the information requested by the complainant would be held for the purposes of journalism, art or literature. It is therefore not covered by FOIA and the BBC is not obliged to provide it.
14. The Commissioner finding is, that the BBC was not obliged to comply with the complainant's information requests.
