Q1 Does the draft guidance cover the relevant issues about the right of access?

Yes

No

Unsure / don't know

If no or unsure/don't know, what other issues would you like to be covered in it?

Q2 Does the draft guidance contain the right level of detail?

Yes

No

Unsure / don't know

If no or unsure/don't know, in what areas should there be more detail within the draft guidance?

Q3 Does the draft guidance contain enough examples?

Yes

No

Unsure / don't know

If no or unsure/don't know, please provide any examples that think should be included in the draft guidance.

More details and examples in relation to providing access to a person's data, rather than copies of documents containing that data, would be helpful. As mentioned on page 20 of the draft guidance, the right to access gives individuals the right to see what personal data a controller processes and does not give them the right to ask for copies of the documents/records containing the personal data. It should be made clear that communications (e.g. emails) containing a person's name, email address, staff or customer reference number, telephone or address, etc. do not need to be provided to individuals who've filed a SAR, but rather that data (name, email address, reference number, telephone, address, etc.) needs to be provided.

Q4 We have found that data protection professionals often struggle with applying and defining 'manifestly unfounded or excessive' subject access requests. We would like to include a wide range of examples from a variety of sectors to help you. Please provide some examples of manifestly unfounded and excessive requests below (if applicable).

A request for "copies of all documents and communications containing my name or email address" from a former employee

Q5 On a scale of 1-5 how useful is the draft guidance?

1 - Not at all useful	2 – Slightly useful	3 – Moderately useful	4 – Very useful	5 – Extremely useful
